Rebellious Southerners Invited Back By Truman

President Truman last night invited dissident Southern Democrats to return to the party fold.

In a fighting speech to the Democratic National Committee, which earlier had purged from its rolls five Southern supporters of the States' Rights candidates of 1948, the President said the party was never in better condition to "carry the battle to the foe" in 1950.

The President reminded his cheering audience that he won his election last year without New York, without the industrial East, and without the "Solid South." He said he was "prouder of that" than anything that "has ever happened to me."

'No Longer Sectional'

But he invited those who bolted from him to "join the party of the people" which he said is "no longer" a sectional party with the "tail wagging the dog."

Speaking in a manner reminiscent of his "give 'em hell" election campaign, the President said that the Republicans will not succeed indefinitely in their "continuous filibuster" to defeat the program embraced in the Democratic platform.

He said the 1948 elections brought a number of young men of liberal tendencies into Congress, and that next year there would be other new ones to carry out the people's platform.

The President was introduced to the strains of "I'm Just Wild About Harry," one of the most popular tunes of his campaign.

Boyle Made Chairman

He said he was "overwhelmed" by the way the party's situation had worked out at yesterday's meeting, at which William M. Boyle, Jr., was elected to succeed J. Howard McGrath, the new Attorney General, as national chairman.

Then he lit into the Republican opposition in Congress. He said it had carried on a continuous filibuster to defeat the platform the people indicated in 1948 they wanted carried out.

"They will not succeed," Mr. Truman said.

Wid To Dissidents

Mr. Truman made it clear he wanted those who dissented in 1948 to return to the fold—but on his own terms.

He said he wanted them to return on the basis of the platform which promised the people exactly what they are going to get.

Here are his words on that topic:

The Democratic Party is a national party and not a sectional party any more. The tail no longer wags the dog. We won the election last November without New York.

Hurricane Veers Off as 2d Heads Toward Mainland

Cape Hatteras, N. C., Aug. 24 (AP).—One hurricane headed into the open Atlantic tonight after sweeping this part of the North Carolina coast. Another was pinpointed about 900 miles southeast of Miami and headed toward the mainland.

The first, known as "Harry's Hurricane" because it coincided with President Truman's visit to Miami Monday, passed this cape late this morning about 20 miles offshore. A boatman drowned in the high seas as he attempted to retrieve a loose skiff.

At 5 p. m. "Harry's Hurricane" was about 150 miles east of Norfolk and going about 20 miles an hour in a northeast direction. It did not affect the Virginia coast area.

The new menace was described as becoming very dangerous but too far distant for a storm alert at the Miami area mainland.

7000 Civilian Defense Department Jobs Are Ordered Abolished in Washington Area

Services Told to Fire 135,000 Workers, Cut Off 12,073 Officers

By Marshall Andrews

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson yesterday announced that the three services had been ordered to fire 135,000 civilian employees, and release 12,073 officers in a drastic economy move.

In addition, some 50 naval and military installations will be closed, and 18 Air Force squadrons will be deactivated.

The expected result, Johnson's office said, would be a saving of 200 million dollars in fiscal 1950 and 500 million dollars a year after that. Meanwhile, a departmental efficiency committee has been set up under Gen. Joseph T. McNarney in the hope of saving an additional one billion dollars annually through avoidance of waste and duplication.

A department spokesman said any savings would not be diverted to other purposes within the armed services. Any funds saved, he declared, would be turned back to the Treasury.

Johnson's announcement, which had been forecast yesterday in The Washington Post, was made officially to a delegation of members of Congress whose districts would be affected by the proposed reductions. They met in his office yesterday at 9:15 a. m., somewhat more than 100 in person or represented by secretaries or special assistants. They came away generally looking unhappy, but with a few exceptions.

Senator Byrd (D., Va.), for instance, applauded the announcement as "the first honest-to-goodness effort that has been made toward reduction in Government personnel" in 10 years. This was in spite of the fact that Navy cuts alone would total 2803 in his State.

Other members also expressed themselves as favorably impressed, but some others reacted violently. Representative Rooney (D., N. Y.), in whose district the Brooklyn Navy Yard will take severe cuts, was indignant. He said the move would do nothing but create unemployment and suggested savings by cutting out "flunkies, chauffeurs, dishwashers, dogwalkers, butlers, and so on."

Auto Rape of Marine's Wife Charged to Boy Prisoner

Traced by a laundry mark on a handkerchief found near the scene, a 15-year-old boy has confessed to the beating, robbery and rape of a Marine sergeant's wife in a parked car early Saturday.

The boy was identified as William Leach, Jr., who will be 16 next month, and lives at 1021 7th st. se., some seven blocks from 13th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se. where the crime took place. He was accused of rape.

Charges will be filed against Leach in Juvenile Court today.

Police reported the boy told the following story:

He had left friends and headed for home early Saturday morning when he saw a woman asleep in a car.

Johnson Drops 4331 Here, 3293 in Virginia And 1745 in Maryland

By Jerry Klutz

Upwards of 7000 Army, Navy and Air Force civilian jobs in and near this city were ordered abolished yesterday by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

It's estimated that half of the jobs affected are either vacant or will be soon as a result of lay-offs, resignations, retirements, etc.

A total of 9369 civilian jobs in this city and in the adjoining States of Virginia and Maryland are slated to be wiped out. In this city the number is 4331; Virginia, 3293, and Maryland, 1745. A breakdown appears below of these jobs to be knocked out.

Secretary Johnson implied that additional personnel cutbacks at the Pentagon will be ordered as soon as surveys now under way can be completed. He's reported to be shooting for the abolition of 200,000 civilian jobs in the military agencies by next June 30. He ordered 135,000 jobs abolished yesterday.

Pink Slips Start in Week

Within minutes after Johnson revealed his mass layoff plan, the scores of agencies and offices prepared to carry them out. The first big flurry of 30-day layoff notices is scheduled to be given employees a week from today, September 1.

A majority of the employees to be laid off will have classified Civil Service status, and the Civil Service Commission will give them high priority reinstatement and transfer rights for a year.

The Gun Factory was listed by Secretary Johnson for a layoff of 2295 jobs. However, the bulk of the cutback was made last month, and the factory will be forced to give notices to between 500 and 700 of its present employees. Most of the new reductions will be made in the maintenance, support, and overhead forces at the factory; few production people will be among those to be fired.

Ordnance Plant to Fire 619

On the other hand, the Alexandria Ordnance Plant will have to fire nearly half of its staff—a total of 619. It was ordered cut from 1319 to 700.

The Army has had a "freeze" on its personnel since August 15 and was questioned and confronted by the number of employees here and nearby to be fired by several hundreds.

The Air Force will be able to absorb the minor reduction it

River Yields Corpses of Man, Woman

Bodies of a drowned man and woman, believed victims of a canoe trip that began Tuesday, were found yesterday in the Potomac River, near Roosevelt Island.

Their overturned canoe, hired the evening before from the Dempsey's Boat House, near Key Bridge, was found by boys near the island.

The man was identified as Emanuel E. Abell, 46, of the Palace Hotel, 1102 14th st. nw. He was a clerk for the Whelan Drug Co., and son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Abell, 1368 Parkwood st. nw.

He was a widower with four sons.

Last night, the woman was identified as Mrs. Lucy Ledbetter, 43, of 1107 11th st. nw., a cosmetician also employed by the Whelan Drug Co., but at a different store from Abell.

The identification was made at the District Morgue by her husband, Clarence Ledbetter, with whom she lived at the 11th street address.

Police were told that Abell rented the canoe about 5 p. m. Tuesday, with a woman companion. It was not returned that night and, yesterday, it was reported to Park police. In the meantime, another boathouse reported that boys had found it.

Harbor police went to the vicinity and found Abell's body. It was clad in underwear and shirt, but no trousers or shoes. It was floating on the Virginia side toward the upper end of Roosevelt Island.

A short time later, Harbor police found the woman's body not far away, also floating. She was fully clothed.

Abell's mother said that his son, Richard, 11, lives with her. The other three sons are James, who works for an airline; William, in the Army in England; and Irving.

At the Whelan Drug Co., it was said that Abell had been employed at a store at 14th and New York ave. nw., but that on Monday, he had been made head cigar salesman at a store at 14th and H sts. nw.

Ambulance Driver, Patient Die Together of Heart Attacks

An ambulance driver died of a heart attack last night in the office of a doctor who had summoned him to aid another fatally stricken heart attack victim.

Both men were pronounced dead on arrival at Georgetown Hospital. The first victim, David Luria, 50, of 2655 41st st. nw., came to the office of Dr. Joseph J. McCarthy, Jr., at 3001 Q st. nw., about 10 p. m., complaining of a chest pain, a hospital spokesman said.

Dr. McCarthy after an examination summoned an ambulance from the Huntemann Funeral Home, 5732 Georgia ave. nw., to take Luria to the hospital. Subsequently he called for a Health Department ambulance to bring oxygen equipment.

As the Health Department ambulance arrived with the oxygen, Samuel V. Hurdle, 58, assistant driver of the Huntemann ambulance, slumped over in the doctor's office.

The two were rushed to Georgetown Hospital but died en route.

Maragon Got 'In Hair' of WAA Officer

By Edward T. Folliard

Joe Major, a World War I comrade of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, yesterday gave the Senate 5-percent inquiry this estimate of John Maragon: "He's hard to get out of your hair."

Major, a liaison officer with the War Assets Administration, who said General Vaughan got him his job, related his experiences with both Maragon and James V. Hunt. Maragon has claimed General Vaughan, White House military aide, as a "good friend." Hunt has been represented as saying he was one of Vaughan's "closest" friends.

Maragon Is Target

The Senate Investigations Subcommittee, which is investigating 5-percenters or influence peddlers, appeared to be bent yesterday on showing that Maragon was wrong in saying he never was paid for negotiating Government business.

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) already has called for Maragon's indictment on a charge of perjury.

Chairman Hoey (D., N. C.), announced that Maragon will be called to testify today, and General Vaughan Friday. There is still doubt as to whether Hunt, who has been described as the "main star," will be able to appear because of the state of his health.

Major, a restless witness attired in slacks, a gray sports coat and green tie, told of Maragon visiting his WAA office "many, many times." He said Maragon sometimes brought others, and he explained it was not necessary for Maragon to tell him he was getting a fee for his services.

Senator McCarthy asked Major: "Whom did you think he was representing when he came around to see you?"

Reply Brings Laughter

"Whoever he had in tow," said Major, and laughter broke out in the committee room.

"Well," he continued, "John Maragon—you people know him. He's hard to get out of your hair." Committee Counsel William P. Rogers reminded Major that Maragon had testified in executive session that he never talked to him about arranging purchases from the Government.

"I just got through telling you he did, Mr. Rogers," Major said. Major, who comes from Kansas City, said he was once a member of famous Battery D, the artillery unit that President Truman commanded in World War I. He explained to reporters later that he was with Battery D only three weeks, and then was transferred to Battery A. He said that he served as a first lieutenant, with General Vaughan in the 129th Regiment in France.

"Who got you the job in Washington?" Senator McCarthy asked him.

"Major said he met Maragon in 1946, the year he joined WAA. He said that at one time Maragon came in with officials of the Trans-American Traders, Inc., an outfit dealing in Government surplus property."

He told how he once helped Maragon draft a letter to pave the way for a New York visit by George O. Ragner, who was interested in buying construction tools for the Greeks rehabilitation program.

"As a matter of fact," said Committee Counsel William P. Rogers, "that was for General Vaughan's signature, wasn't it?"

"I would assume so," said Major.

"John Maragon told you so."

Major said later, however, that he didn't know whether General Vaughan signed the letter or not.

When the hearing is resumed at 10 o'clock this morning in Room 357 of the Senate Office Building, See PERCENT, Page 7, Column 5.

ICC Action Expected Soon

SEC Approves Capital Transit Stock Sale to Wolfson Group

By S. Oliver Goodman

Post Reporter

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday authorized North America Co. to sell 109,458 Capital Transit Co. shares to Louis E. Wolfson and eight associates of Jacksonville, Fla., for $2,189,160. At the same time, the SEC granted a request that the stock be sold without competitive bidding.

Thus, the Wolfson group cleared one hurdle in its efforts to acquire stock control of Capital Transit.

Still to act in the transaction is the Interstate Commerce Commission, whose examiner, Vernon F. Baker, has recommended disapproval. The ICC claims jurisdiction under Section 5 of the ICC Act, which requires that any change in control of two or more carriers must be approved by the commission.

Decision Due Soon

With the filing of additional data by the Wolfson group this week.

An ICC spokesman said last night the record is complete and a decision will be rendered shortly. The SEC, in authorizing the stock sale, reviewed North American Co.'s futile attempts to dispose of the Capital Transit shares in the past. It noted the testimony of Herbert C. Freeman, president of the holding company, that no persons other than the Wolfson group had offered to purchase the stock.

The SEC stated:

"We conclude, in view of the record regarding the existence of arm's-length bargaining, the widespread publicity which the proposed sale has received and the absence of any other offer for the stock, and considering particularly the nature of the security involved, together with its volatile earnings history... that there has been a showing sufficient to justify the granting of an exemption from See TRANSIT, Page 6, Column 4."

Satellites Add To Defenses Against West

Berlin, Aug. 24 (NYHT).—The Soviet orbit in Europe, from the Baltic Sea to the Near East, has in recent months intensified security measures, including the laying of minefields in some East-West border sections and the transfer eastward of entire border villages, according to information reaching the Western Allies.

These activities, in the opinion of some Western observers, may

Don't Jibe, Acheson Says

By The Associated Press

Secretary of State Acheson declared yesterday that Communists the world over would have difficulty reconciling Russia's violent diplomatic attacks on Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia with the Soviet peace offensive.

Acheson told a news conference the Communists will try to pass off the sword rattling of the Soviet as the cooing of a dove. But the dove seems to have a somewhat sore throat, he said.

He linked the Russia war of nerves which has been greatly intensified this week against Yugoslavia. It is considered likely that the Soviet Union wanted to make its position as secure as possible before beginning the current diplomatic offensive against Marshal Tito.

The most extensive effort to seal off Eastern Europe from the West has been reported from Czechoslovakia. This summer a whole network of minefields and other fortifications have been erected on the borders of the United States zone of Germany.

Hungary also is resorting to barbed-wire installations to protect its western borders with Austria.

Mass transfers of so-called unreliable minorities have been reported from Eastern Europe and European Russia. It can now be reliably confirmed that Jewish populations have in recent months been among the victims of the Soviet policy sending into Asiatic Russia any element whose

O'Donnell's Sea Grill Heldup; Bandit Escapes in Taxicab

A lone bandit held up the cashier of O'Donnell's Sea Grill, 1221 E. st. nw., about 12:30 a. m. today and escaped in a taxicab with the contents of the cash register.

The cashier, Miss Inez Fender, told police she believed the man was armed. No estimate of the amount taken was immediately available, but Miss Fender said he got receipts taken in since 6 p. m. Wednesday.

A police lookout was broadcast for a white man, 30 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighing 135 pounds. He was dressed in a white shirt and dark blue trousers and was hatless. Police said later they had located the cab near 17th st. and Rhode Island ave. nw. The driver told them the bandit had left his cab at this point.

Miss Fender's cashier's booth is located just inside the door of the restaurant. She said the man held his hand in his pocket as if he had a gun.

Shortly before 1 a. m., police reported a cab driver was held up by his passenger in the 1400 block of V st. nw. The bandit was last seen running south through a nearby alley.

He was described as a light-skinned Negro of thin build, with a pencil mustache. He was dressed in a dark brown plaid suit, white shirt and straw hat.

The cab driver, Richard A. Pugh, 23, of 1415 Girard st. nw., said the thief made off with $7.80.

Probers to Call Other Officials, Airplane-Maker Martin to Testify

By John G. Norris

Post Reporter

Cedric R. Worth, special assistant to Undersecretary of the Navy Dan Kimball, was suspended yesterday after he admitted writing and circulating the mysterious anonymous document that touched off the B-36 investigation.

Disclosure of the identity of the long-sought author of the document caused a sensation which promised far-reaching consequences.

The House probers raised the possibility of criminal prosecution of the 49-year-old official. They announced they would call top Navy chiefs and Glenn L. Martin, Baltimore aircraft manufacturer, to determine if they played any part in preparation of the anonymous communication.

Clears His Superiors

Worth, testifying under oath, said neither his superiors nor other

Senate Rejects House Recess Plan; May Reconsider

House members voted yesterday to give themselves a four-week vacation but the Senate blocked the move at least temporarily and then plunged into angry debate over adjournment plans.

With large numbers of its members already absent from the Capitol, the House overwhelmingly approved a resolution to recess the chamber from August 26 to September 21 to give the Senate time to "catch up" on legislation.

But the Senate brushed aside the unwritten rule that one chamber automatically consents to the recess plans of the other, and voted 58 to 25 to reject the resolution.

A possibility the Senate might later change its mind was raised when Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) offered a motion to reconsider the surprise vote. Taft had led the original drive to block the House vacation.

But even if the Senate stands pat, all House members need not remain in Washington. Under Congressional rules, the House will have to meet every three days. But with advance agreement to transact no business, the chamber need have no set number of members on hand.

Lucas Lays Fuse to Blast DP Bill Out

By the United Press

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas of Illinois yesterday introduced a resolution that would give the Senate a chance to vote on the House-passed bill "liberalizing" the admission of displaced persons to this country. The measure has been bottled up since June 6 in the Senate Judiciary Committee, whose chairman, Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), has refused to send it to the floor. McCarran has said he sees no chance of action before next May.

Lucas was joined by 14 Senators, including Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and other influential Republicans, in sponsoring the resolution. It would relieve the Judiciary Committee of further consideration of the bill and bring it before the Senate.

Lucas said the bill, part of President Truman's campaign platform last fall, would remove "restrictions regarded as discriminatory against Catholics and Jews."

Lucas said that "ordinarily" it is not good parliamentary procedure to take a bill away from a committee, but "I have tried, by every means within my power, to secure the release of this bill."

U. S. Job Total Drops Despite Building Rise

Despite a pickup in the construction and auto manufacturing industries, nonagricultural employment declined by 230,000 between mid-June and mid-July, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

The July total of 43,509,000 employed in the nonfarm industries stands 1,600,000 below the July level of 1949.

A large decline in jobs occurred during the month in the trade industries, which led off 100,000 workers, partly because of the seasonal lull in business.

The manufacturing industries, however, were hardest hit, letting 110,000 workers go, chiefly in the durable goods field. There's been a steady drop in employment in the durable goods industries, with employment off 850,000 from July of last year.

Construction contractors added 70,000 workers to their rolls, for a total of 2,150,000. The auto builders increased their job lists by 20,000 during the month to attain near-peak employment. But iron and steel, and the machinery industries, furloughed or fired 80,000 workers.

Soft-goods showed a small rise in jobs for the month, largely reflecting seasonal gains in food processing, apparel and leather. The job situation improved somewhat in woolens and worsteds, women's apparel and shoes, but reductions continued in cotton, silk and rayon, and hosiery mills.

Another Bureau of Labor Statistics report issued yesterday disclosed that weekly earnings for the 11,700,000 production workers in the Nation's factories averaged $53.66 in mid-July, continuing at the preceding month's level. The factory work week, at 38.8 hours, maintained the slight upturn reported last month, but averages one hour below July of 1948.

Tobin Asks VFW To Back Minimum Wage Increase

Miami, Fla., Aug. 24 (P).—Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin today urged war veterans to back the Administration's program to boost the minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents an hour.

Tobin, speaking before the golden jubilee convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, departed from his prepared address to "encourage the Senate to follow the House of Representatives' approval of this measure assuring a fair minimum wage."

In the morning session United States Ambassador-at-large Philip C. Jessup called for an all-out "fight against the menace of aggressive communism."

Carson Wins Approval of Senate Unit

Post Reporter

The Senate Commerce Committee, splitting along strict party lines yesterday voted 8 to 4 to approve of John Carson of Detroit as a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

At the same time, it ordered hearings on the equally controversial reapportionment of Leland P. Olds to be a Federal Power Commissioner. Republican members protested that Carson's political and economic beliefs disqualified him for the Trade Commission but they were overridden by a solid bloc of Democratic votes.

Would Replace Freer
If confirmed by the Senate, Carson would fill the unexpired term of Robert Freer, resigned, which has three years to run.

Most of the opposition centers on the fact that Carson is Washington director of the Cooperative League of America.

He told the committee when defending his qualifications, that he did not endorse the views of Dr. James Warburton, the League's president emeritus, that cooperatives eventually will supplant the free enterprise system. He said he fully supports capitalism and considers the cooperative movement to be merely a supplement.

As for politics, Carson said he has not registered since 1916 when he was an Indiana Democrat and that he now is an independent. Freer was a Republican.

Republicans Join Brewster
Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) who led the fight against Carson, was joined in opposing confirmation by Republican Senators John W. Bricker (Ohio), Homer E. Capehart (Ind.) and Clyde M. Reed (Kans.). The other GOP committee member, Senator Charles W. Tobey (N. H.) did not vote.

Voting for confirmation were Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (Colo.) and Senators Ernest W. McFarland (Ariz.), Warren G. Magnuson (Wash.), Francis J. Myers (Pa.), Brian McMahon (Conn.), Herbert R. O'Connor (Md.), Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.) and Estes Kefauver (Tenn.), all Democrats.

The hearings on the Olds appointment will be conducted by a five-man subcommittee headed by Lyndon Johnson. No date has been fixed.

Olds has been a member of the Federal Power Commission since 1939 and his nomination for reapportionment has been pending before the committee since last June 22.

Proclamation Puts Atlantic Pact in Force

By The Associated Press

In a simple White House ceremony, the United States yesterday committed itself through the North Atlantic Pact to resist any attack on western Europe.

Russia was thus confronted with one of history's greatest peacetime combinations of potential military power.

The final steps necessary to bring the 12-nation alliance legally into existence were taken in President Truman's oval office in the presence of Secretary of State Acheson, Defense Secretary Johnson and diplomats representing most of the other member nations.

Ambassador Henri Bonnet of France first presented to Acheson notice that France had ratified the treaty. Acheson then informed President Truman that the French ratification fulfilled the treaty requirements for its coming into force and the President signed a proclamation declaring the pact in existence.

Called Purely Defensive
In a statement, the Chief Executive declared that "no nation need fear the results of our cooperation" under the treaty, which he described as a purely defensive arrangement within the framework of the United Nations charter.

"By this treaty," he declared, "we are not only seeking to establish freedom from aggression and from the use of force in the North Atlantic community, but we are also actively striving to promote and preserve peace throughout the world."

He also asserted that "this is a momentous occasion not only for all the signatories of the treaty but for all peoples who share our profound desire for stability and peaceful development."

Puts Pledge in Force
His signature on the proclamation at 12:42 p. m. brought into force a pledge by all 12 pact nations to take whatever action each considers necessary to resist an attack on any one of them.

Diplomats representing the 12 nations already were preparing plans for a meeting of the "council" of the North Atlantic Treaty which is expected to be held here by mid-September. The council will establish a defense committee, to be responsible for developing a grand strategic plan of defense.

While the terms of the pact are general and will apply to any attack against any of the member nations for at least 20 years, the alliance actually is the western answer to any threat of Russian aggression against western Europe.

U. N. to Launch Study Of Near East Economy
Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 24 (P).—The U. N. Palestine Conciliation Commission reached quick agreement with Israeli and Arab representatives today for a large-scale economic survey of the Near East by a U. N. commission of 40 members.

The survey group will be under the chairmanship of an American. It will investigate all phases of economic life in Israel and the Arab countries with a view toward extending technical aid and economic "know-how" in the same pattern as President Truman's program to aid underdeveloped areas.

It had been assumed Clark would have to excuse himself from consideration of a large number of cases because of his interest in them as Attorney General. But an aide said yesterday the new justice had been checking over the more than 60 actions already docketed for the new term, as well as those the Justice Department expects to bring, and discovered he would be barred from "surprisingly few," perhaps only a dozen or so.

In the Senate yesterday, Edward L. Leahy, Bristol, R. I., attorney and state tax expert, was sworn in to succeed McGrath as Senator. William M. Boyle, Jr., took over McGrath's national committee post in another ceremony yesterday to complete the general job shuffle.

Devers Succeeded by Clark As Field Forces Commander

By the United Press

Gen. Mark W. Clark, famed leader of the World War II Fifth Army which swept through Italy, will succeed Gen. Jacob L. Devers as chief of Army Field Forces on September 30, the Army announced yesterday.

Devers will retire on that date after 40 years' service. Clark, now Sixth Army Commander with headquarters at San Francisco, will be succeeded by Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, now deputy chief of staff.

Clark's new headquarters will be at Fort Monroe, Va. He is a native of Madison Barracks, N. Y., and became known as one of the leading generals of the Second World War when he made a daring, secret trip to French North Africa to confer with French officials before the Allied landings there.

After the Salerno and Italian campaigns, Clark was promoted to the command of the Fifteenth Army Group in December, 1944. He went to the Sixth Army in June, 1947.

Wedemeyer's name reached newspaper headlines during World War II when he became first chief of staff of the Southwest Asia Command. Later he commanded United States forces in the Chinese theater.

Clark Says U. S. Needs More Alaska Troops
San Francisco, Aug. 24 (P).—Gen. Mark W. Clark, new chief of the Army Field Forces, said today "from my point of view the more troops we have in Alaska, the better."

At a press conference after the announcement of his elevation from commanding general of the Sixth Army, Clark in answer to questions said: "I think it (Alaska) is a very important strategic area. We should be prepared to take care of its defense. I hope to have the opportunity of going up there very promptly to see what the situation is."

Anti-Bias Rider Put in Housing Bill

Bargaining By Industries Is Assailed

By Sam Stavisky

Spokesmen for three steel companies yesterday urged Congress to ban industry-wide bargaining as a method of curbing "excessive concentrations of economic power in the hands of labor leaders." The call for legislation was made at a Senate Banking and Currency Committee hearing on alleged monopolistic practices of organized labor.

Admiral Ben Moreell, president of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., charged that industry-wide bargaining inevitably will lead to compulsory arbitration. Government control of wages, prices and production and of the entire economy.

Suggests Two Steps

He suggested two steps be taken by Congress to protect the "public interest" from abuses of power by labor leaders:

1. Define the legitimate objectives of labor unions so as to prohibit them from controlling production, preventing improvement, imposing any form of featherbedding, fixing prices, excluding prejudiced articles and limiting use of labor-saving machinery.
2. Restrict the power of unions by limiting the size of unions, subjecting them generally to the anti-trust laws, and forbidding industry-wide bargaining.

The first step can and should be taken immediately, declared the Jones & Laughlin president. The second step, he said, should be taken after study of procedure.

Moreell attacked presidential act-finding boards—such as the one now investigating the dispute between the steel industry and the CIO Steelworkers—as inevitably leading to compulsory arbitration.

It May Take Time

"It may take time, but it will soon become apparent that, irrespective of politics, the findings of these boards must be enforced," Moreell said. "The adoption of a regular system of compulsory arbitration is then only a short step away."

W. H. Colvin, Jr., president of Crucible Steel Co., charged that the smaller, specialist steel companies are being squeezed by contracts the union gets from major steel producers.

"The smaller companies must agree to an industry-wide pattern of rates of pay, a pattern that ignores the circumstances of individual companies," Colvin asserted.

Continuance of this policy by a labor monopoly, Colvin declared, "may in due course result in a monopoly of productive facilities" as tool and specialty steel companies dwindle in number because of inability to keep up with increasing demands of the union.

To Continue Today

Luke Sawyer, executive vice president of the Babcock & Wilcox Co., doesn't get a chance to negotiate with the Steelworkers Union.

"For almost eight years we have been required to follow the wage and labor conditions pattern of the U. S. Steel Corp. and not once have we had the opportunity of pointing out that there are substantial differences between Big Steel and ourselves," Sawyer said.

The hearings will be continued this morning.

Steel Hearing Time Extended

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—President Truman's three fact-finders today gave the steel companies three more days to state their case against a union demand for a 30-cent-an-hour "package" increase.

This will stretch the hearing through next Tuesday and force the fact-finding board to ask the White House for a delay in making its recommendations for a settlement to avert a national steel strike.

The truce between the industry and the CIO Steelworkers Union ends September 14, and the extended hearing will mean less time to try for agreement after the board publishes its findings.

The union will wind up its rebuttal testimony Thursday, using less than the full eight days allotted to it in the beginning. The companies have already exhausted their eight days in direct testimony, and want rebuttal time.

In rebuttal testimony, the union pushed its pension plan in testimony by Murray Latimer, its pension expert.

Latimer said it was Congress' intent that social security should be bolstered by private pension systems.

Senate GOP Claims Strength To Force China Aid in Bill

By Murray Marder

Senate Republicans yesterday claimed sufficient strength to force aid for China into the Administration's foreign arms program if that compromise can be reached on that issue.

At the same time, Administration spokesmen in the combined Senate Foreign Relations-Armed Services Committee indicated a willingness to add about 100 million dollars to the program for use in the "Far East," at the President's discretion.

The Administration men declare they will stand fast against specifying "China" in the bill, and claim enough votes in the 25-man committee to back up their position.

One GOP leader privately conceded that the China-aid proponents may be outvoted in the committee, but he predicted they would win the dispute on the Senate floor.

Compromise Hope Expressed

The issue bears major significance to the fate of the requested $1,450,000,000 arms bill, and both factions expressed hope that a last-minute compromise can be reached to avert an open battle over the China aid.

If the dispute is not settled in committee, it means the arms bill will go to the floor on a factional basis, with the China-aid forces holding key votes on the over-all program.

This could be fatal to the Administration's hope of restoring a large part of the $300,000,000 that the House cut out of the arms bill.

On the other hand, to concede further to the China forces by specifying arms aid to China in the "Far East" section of the bill, the State Department believes, would jeopardize the Administration position on China.

The recent White Paper on China, which the National Government as a failure, and Secretary of State Acheson has asked a withholding of further China legislation until completion of a policy study now under way.

May Postpone Action

Senate committee action on the China fund is expected to be postponed until a vote is taken on the requested $1,160,000,000 for western European members of the North Atlantic Treaty. The committee has already approved the requested $211,370,000 aid for Greece and Turkey, and $27,640,000 for Iran, Korea and the Philippines.

At the executive meeting yesterday, the combined Senate committee debated another portion of the arms program, which indirectly concerns the China issue.

The arms bill, in addition to the $1,450,000,000 requested cash outlay, includes so-called surplus weapons that originally cost this Nation about 450 million dollars but would be charged to the program at only "rehabilitation" cost—about 77 million dollars.

The House wrote into its bill a 450-million-dollar limit on such surpluses that can be transferred abroad. It also provided that arms "borrowed" from this Nation's military reserves to get the program under way should be charged to

Reds' Counsel

Accuses Juror, Asks Mistrial

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—The defense in the 32-week-old Communist conspiracy trial moved for a mistrial today on the ground that one juror had "flagrantly and repeatedly" violated court rules against discussing the case.

Federal Judge Harold R. Medina took the motion under advisement and recessed the trial until 10 a. m. Thursday.

The accused juror was Russell Janney, author of the best-selling novel, "Miracle of the Bells."

Defense Attorney George W. Crockett, Jr., submitted an affidavit including a newspaper article about a speech Janney made one month after he became a juror.

It quoted him as saying, "We are already fighting a war with communism and it should be a fight to the death."

Crockett suggested that if Medina refused to grant a mistrial, Janney should be removed from the jury.

The defense also submitted an affidavit by Miss Carol Nathanson declaring Janney had voiced biased views on communism.

With the affidavit were 89 pages of hand-written notes Miss Nathanson allegedly jotted down after conversations with Janney. The notes indicated he had talked to her seven times about the case and had further violated the court's instructions by reading newspaper accounts of the trial.

Miss Truman Held Earning WCTU Honor

An Arlington school director explained last night why she had induced the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union to give a life membership to Miss Margaret Truman, daughter of the President.

"Margaret is a very fine girl trying her level best to be a good Christian American citizen."

The explanation was made by Miss Anna L. Payne, 57, of 2013 N. Adams st., Arlington, who has been a member of the WCTU since she was a small child. She was enrolled by her mother in the White Ribbon Recruits, for children under six years of age.

Miss Payne, who runs the Althaus Hall School for children, telegraphed the WCTU convention in Philadelphia with the life membership suggestion. The Arlington County Union and the Virginia Youth Temperance Council paid the $25 fee, it was reported.

"Margaret's grandmother on her mother's side is a member of the WCTU out in Missouri, I understand," Miss Payne said. "Then, too, Margaret made it known very clearly that intoxicating drinks would not be served at her parties."

"We want to strengthen her stand in the right course," Miss Payne added. "I believe her family is interested in the welfare of our Nation from that standpoint and I think Margaret herself believes in prohibition."

The present program, he told reporters, similarly shows "an indicated disparity" in the charge to be made for weapons sent to western European nations, and those destined for Korea and the Philippines. Defense officials will have "to justify" this, he declared.

Spain Pleased at News U. S. Ships Plan Visit

Madrid, Aug. 24 (AP)—Spain expressed interest and satisfaction today in the announcement that four U. S. Navy warships would pay a courtesy visit to El Ferrol, birthplace of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

The forthcoming autumn visit of United States Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and members of the Senate Armed Forces Committee has not yet been made public here.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—Directors of McKesson & Robbins today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock and the regular quarterly of 60 cents, both payable September 15 to stock of record Sept. 1. This is the first extra in many years.

End Disunity by 1952 or Face Economic Ruin, Possibly War, European Nations Are Warned

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 24 (AP)—The European Consultative Assembly wound up its economic debate today with the generally expressed conviction that the Marshall Plan is being frittered away and disaster impends.

No one disputed warnings from Socialists, Conservatives and middle-of-the-roads that if Europe cannot remedy its economic disunity before the end of the European Recovery Program in 1952 she is in for an economic collapse, social upheavals and perhaps war.

There was general agreement that two world wars fought in Europe, the rise of the United States and the industrialization of agricultural countries overseas had totally changed the continent's economic position in the world.

Statements that little long-range constructive work is being done under the Marshall Plan also went unchallenged.

United States aid has been praised as generous and wise. But criticism has been turned upon representatives of the Marshall Plan countries themselves. It has been charged that these representatives in the Organization for European Economic Cooperation have not been able to submerge national interests in behalf of Europe's welfare.

Former French Premier Paul Reynaud yesterday urged that a real European parliament be elected by direct suffrage with power to knock together the conflicting economies.

One resolution introduced today by Winston Churchill's European Movement declared that "unless immediate steps are taken to promote a European economic union, there must inevitably be a catastrophic decline in the standard of living of the European peoples and social disturbances endangering their democratic way of life."

Another resolution proposed by French Socialist Andre Philip said the economic unification of Europe is the only way of avoiding "a crisis of extreme gravity."

British Laborites, however, cautioned against the "union or collapse" specter raised by these resolutions. They said an economic union stripping tariff protection from some industries would throw great numbers of people out of work and the medicine would be worse than the disease. Britain's Laborites generally advise a go-slow, take-a-good-look policy toward proposals to unite planned and free economies.

The real battle will come over the Churchill-backed resolution in the committee on economic affairs, probably in about ten days. As introduced, it bore 46 signatures from among the 101 delegates from 12 countries.

Lord Layton, a British Liberal, predicted the British pound would be devalued soon, and urged that other European currencies be devalued in concert.

He also urged that the Bretton Woods Agreement, which he said provided for orderly monetary adjustments by "moving from one fixed point to another," be shelved.

He urged that the agreement be laid aside temporarily to allow "certain currencies to go free for a time in order that they should find their natural level."

Mrs. Mesta Gets Into Luxembourg On Second Try

Luxembourg, Aug. 24 (AP)—Mrs. Perle Mesta, new United States Minister to Luxembourg, arrived in Luxembourg city this afternoon after a slight mixup with customs guards.

The mixup came because Mrs. Mesta's car went to the wrong border point to enter the country. All arrangements had been made for her to cross at Rodange. Instead she went first to St. Martin, about 2 miles away, where no one was expecting her and no arrangements had been made.

She was finally directed to Rodange where the crossing was without incident.

She quickly made the 20-mile trip to Luxembourg city and was met at the official residence by George L. West, Jr., charge d'affaires.

Dutch, Indonesians Down to Business

The Hague, Aug. 24 (NYHT)—The round-table conference between delegates from the Netherlands and Indonesia today got down to the business of settling their countries' affairs.

The conference steering committee attacked the routine problem of assigning items on the agenda to the proper subcommittees.

The atmosphere, maintained the standard of cordiality that was set yesterday.

Truman Invites Rebels to Return without the industrial East and without the Solid South. And I am prouder of that than anything that has ever happened to me.

"And that doesn't mean that we are not inviting the industrial East and the Solid South and all the rest of the country to join the party of the people and help the country go forward. That is exactly what we want, and that is exactly what we are going to accomplish in the next two years."

Purge by Committee

It was the civil rights plank in that platform which led angry Southerners to bolt, and set up the States' Rights ticket.

Besides purging five of the bolters yesterday, the National Committee also ordered the name of a sixth Southerner erased from its rolls, even though he had already resigned.

Those removed for supporting the States' Rights presidential ticket of Governors J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, and Fielding Wright of Mississippi in 1948, in protest against the Administration's civil rights program, were:

Marion Rushon, Alabama; William H. Talbot, Louisiana; J. B.

Snider and Mrs. Hermes Gautier, Mississippi, and Mrs. Anne A. Agnew, South Carolina. Thurmond's name also was stricken as a member, although he had resigned.

States' Righters promptly charged that their members had been "railroaded" off the committee.

Leander H. Perez, New Orleans, named director of a new States' Rights bureau set up in Washington yesterday, told newsmen the purge had been conducted in a "high-handed and unfair manner."

Perez said it was only a coincidence that the States' Rights headquarters here was set up on the same day of the National Committee meeting.

Wallace W. Wright, Mississippi, announced the appointment of Perez, a former Louisiana judge, to head the bureau. Wright said that among other things the organization will campaign for adoption of a States' Rights amendment to the Constitution. He said 14 States would support such an effort. Perez stated organizations will be set up in all States.

The committee threw out a contest brought against Wright Morrow, Texas committeeman, by Byron Skelton of Temple, Tex. Skelton had questioned Morrow's party loyalty in the last campaign. The committee found the evidence did not support the charges.

This contest was the only one that brought extensive floor debate. A motion from the floor to deny Morrow a seat was tabled by voice vote.

In each seating controversy, the committee accepted by voice vote the recommendations of its credentials committee. The five seats of the bolters were declared vacant and no action was taken to fill them at this time.

The committee elected Senator Burnett Maybank to take Thurmond's place as South Carolina committeeman on grounds that a vacancy existed there before the National Committee met.

Maybank expressed appreciation, but said he would have to clear up his status at another meeting of his State committee. The National Committee, however, said it considered him officially elected.

One of them, Louisiana's Talbot, said Tuesday that if he was kicked out he would take the fight back to his State, and "slap them down" as he did in 1948. Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, and South Carolina cast their electoral votes for Thurmond last year. Texas supported Mr. Truman.

On the home fronts of the ousted Southerners, comment came quickly and caustically.

Governor Wright of Mississippi, the States' Rights vice presidential candidate, charged the national committee operated in "gangster style."

Alabama's Gov. James E. Folsom, a Truman supporter, wired the committee his congratulations. But an Alabama States' Rights leader, Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of the State Democratic Executive Committee, said the action would solidify the South in its fight against "centralization of Government in bureaucratic Washington."

Boyle, a 46-year-old lawyer from Kansas City, Mo., and a long-time friend of the President, had no opposition for chairman. He succeeds Senator J. Howard McGrath, who resigned yesterday to be sworn in as Attorney General.

Boyle has been a $30,000-a-year executive vice chairman of the committee. He told reporters that his salary will continue. In the past, chairmen usually have not been paid.

Dr. R. B. Robins, Arkansas committeeman, failed to gain adoption of a resolution criticizing high party officials for supporting compulsory health insurance. Jonathan Daniels, North Carolina committeeman, and only Southerner on the credentials committee, put through an amendment to the credentials report. This expressed the appreciation of the full national committee to those Democrats in the South who supported Mr. Truman in the last election.

Dixiecrats' Exit ...

THIS WAY OUT—Ousted from membership in the Democratic National Committee, William H. Talbot (at door, back to camera) of New Orleans, followed by Judge Leander H. Perez (back to camera, center) leave the committee meeting yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel. They were "expunged from membership rolls" for supporting the Dixie-born States' Rights ticket against President Truman in the 1948 campaign. Three others were also ruled out at the start of the meeting.

Stepfather Admits Torturing Crippled Veteran 18 Months

Montesano, Wash., Aug. 24 (U.P.)—after neighbors told of hearing cries. A crippled Air Force veteran, whose stepfather admitted torturing and beating him for 18 months "to make a man out of him," today said that a half-sister stood by and laughed while he lay on the floor screaming.

Henry Chum, 29, a one-legged World War II veteran, said his 14-year-old half-sister several times witnessed the hour-long beatings with a knotted rope and would ask laughingly:

"Are you having a good time?" The stepfather, Frank W. Chase, 52, was taken at gun point by a posse of American Legionnaires yesterday at the request of Grays Harbor County Sheriff Mike Kilgore. In a written confession today, Chase said, "I was only trying to make a man out of him." Chase was held on a charge of assault.

Chum was found in his home Monday in nearby Oakville. "March 11, 1943, in an air raid on mass of bruises," Kilgore said, New Guinea.

Eden Urges U. S., Britain End Bickering

London, Aug. 24 (U.P.)—Anthony Eden pleaded today for an end to "bickering and hard words" between the United States and Britain.

The deputy Conservative leader told a political meeting in Wales: "Relations between the British Commonwealth and the United States are much bigger than any political party in either country. They are the future of the world."

If trans-Atlantic name-calling takes the place of "sympathetic understanding and stern effort," he said, "then no one will gain except Moscow."

Said Eden:

Free Health Care May Hinge on Talks Here

London, Aug. 24 (U.P.)—A reliable informant said today Britain's Labor Government may have to consider doing away with its free medical service if next month's dollar-pound talks in Washington fail.

The informant, who refused to be identified, but who is close to the Government, said Britain's leaders may have to think about having each person pay a shilling (20 cents) for each visit to the doctor if the Washington talks flop.

"The government should disabuse their minds and the minds of their supporters of the idea that any responsible American wishes to try to dictate to the British government and the British people how we should run our own country."

"The truth is that our American friends have given us and to Europe as a whole in these post-war years the most generous help without making the least attempt to interfere in any way in our own political controversies."

Preliminary Anglo-American pound-dollar talks began today at a luncheon given by Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin for Paul G. Hoffman and Averell Harriman, top European Cooperation Administration chiefs.

The Anglo-American-Canadian economic conference begins September 7. ECA spokesmen stressed that Hoffman and Harriman are not negotiating. Their talks with British leaders mainly affect this country's part in the recovery program.

Hoisted by Finger

Avonmouth, Eng., Aug. 24 (U.P.)—A crane hook got caught today in a wedding ring worn by Gilbert Britton, 62, a dock worker. Britton was lifted 15 feet into the air. He was lowered to safety and taken to a hospital, where the ring was sawed off his finger.

Crimes Laid to Von Mannstein

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 24 (U.P.)—Former German Field Marshal Erich von Mannstein today was described as a willing tool of Hitler in the mass extermination of Nazi victims during World War II.

Prosecutor Sir Arthur Comyns-Carr told a seven-man British war crimes tribunal Von Mannstein was "criminally responsible" for carrying out the human extermination policy in Poland and Russia. "The accused gave himself unsparingly for almost five years of Hitler's campaigns to the service of this barbarous (extermination) policy and was one of its principal executives," said the prosecutor.

If Von Mannstein had objected to the "illegal and brutal orders" he received, he might have got his own way, Sir Arthur said.

Von Mannstein pleaded innocent to a 17-count indictment covering 243 incidents in which an estimated 500,000 Poles and Russians, both soldiers and civilians, were slaughtered by troops under Von Mannstein's command.

Von Mannstein's counsel, R. T. Paget, indicated he would cite Russia's forced labor practices and argue that no nation can complain about practices it carries out itself.

White Paper Fair Record, Acheson Says

By the United Press
Secretary of State Dean Acheson yesterday defended the Administration's China White Paper as "a fair and honest record," and dismissed as false charges that it was doctored to cover up mistakes. "It is insinuated the documents were deliberately omitted in order to falsify the record," Acheson said. "These insinuations are not supported by any evidence. They could not be supported because there is not an iota of truth in them."

The Secretary conceded that many China documents were left out, but he said this was done solely to conserve space. He emphasized that the White Paper was a compilation of State Department documents, and that there had been no claim that it included documents from other governments or other United States agencies, notably the National Military Establishment.

Acheson mentioned only one critic by name—Representative Walter Judd (R., Minn.), who last week released a "summary" of a 1945 military intelligence report on the Chinese Communists. Judd inferred the document was left out of the White House Paper to bolster the department's "feeble case."

Acheson said he had never seen the "summary" until Judd released it; the "summary" represented only the views of the officers who wrote it, not the War Department, and therefore was not circulated; it differed "in some important respects" from the original military intelligence report on which it allegedly was based; and the report was a War Department and not a State Department document.

It was understood Acheson singled out Judd because of a feeling that the Congressman's criticism was unfair. Sources close to Acheson said the Secretary had discussed the department's position at secret conferences attended by Judd and the Congressman made no reference to the "summary" at that time.

Chiang Begs Western China To Fight On

Hongkong, Aug. 24 (U.P.)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek appealed today to the western provinces of China to fight to the last against communism which, he said, is attempting to enslave the world.

Preparing for the apparently inevitable capture of Canton, the present emergency capital, Chiang flew to Chungking today.

Chiang conferred in Canton with top Nationalist officials. It was believed they decided to hold Canton as long as possible and then make the last stand in Kwangsi and Szechuan provinces.

The Communist advance in Fukien province continued with little opposition and advance forces were reported to have outflanked Amoy, reaching Changchow, 25 miles inland, and Tsingkiang, 35 miles north.

The Kiangsi and Hunan fronts were reported comparatively quiet.

U. S. Canton Consulate Closes After 63 Years

Canton, Aug. 24 (U.P.)—The United States consulate in Canton closed down today after 63 years of operation and American interests in the area were handed over to the British.

Closure of the oldest American consulate in China was ordered last week by the State Department. Chinese Communist armies have pushed south to within 165 miles of the Nationalist capital.

Prio Fires Cuban Army Chief for Insubordination

Havana, Aug. 24 (P.)—President Carlos Prio Socarras today personally fired for insubordination Maj. Gen. Genovevo Perez Damera, chief of the Cuban army. The military leader once played an important role in thwarting an attempt to launch an expedition against the Dominican Republic from Cuban soil.

Dr. Prio named Gen. Ruperto Cabrera to the top army job and announced he had dismissed Perez Damera because "disagreements" had arisen between himself and the army chieftain "concerning the way in which the chief of state should be obeyed."

Bizonal Germany's Trade Hits New Peak

Frankfurt, Aug. 24 (P.)—Bizonal Germany's imports and exports climbed to a new postwar high in July.

Joint Export-Import Agency (JIEA) officials said today that imports totaled 240 million dollars, an increase of more than 45 per cent over June.

Exports amounted to 113 million, an increase of nine million dollars over the previous record set in June.

Interfaith Amity Urged by Priest

"Whatever dislike Protestants have for Catholics in this country actually is not dislike for Catholicism, but for what they believe Catholicism is," the Rev. Thomas F. Gavin of Canisius College, Buffalo, N. Y., declared yesterday.

Father Gavin, who has taught courses on Protestantism to Catholic groups throughout the country, is a member of the faculty of the summer school of Catholic Action now in progress at Georgetown University. The school, which has been held in six other major cities in the United States, is sponsored by the Sodality of Our Lady in St. Louis. It will end Saturday afternoon.

He pointed to the following common beliefs of Protestants about Catholicism, which, if true, "no sensible, self-respecting, reasonable Catholic would approve."

1. Catholics look on all Protestant marriages as invalidly contracted and all Protestant children as illegitimate.
2. All Catholics have to do is go to confession and then they can go out and commit the same sins again.
3. Catholics worship statues and idols; they worship the Blessed Virgin.
4. The church is more interested in political than spiritual power.
5. Catholics have no respect for the Bible.

These beliefs, he asserted, are "completely repugnant to human instincts" and if they were true, "no right-minded person would approve of the Catholic church."

Misunderstanding between Protestants and Catholics, Father Gavin said, will decrease only if all groups make a concerted effort to cooperate and to understand each other's beliefs.

The practical solution toward eliminating these Protestant-Catholic misunderstandings, he said, is for each group to work separately to increase harmonious relations.

At the present time, he said, it is not practical to work together in a united effort to decrease misunderstanding because "we don't seem to get along together in groups where the basis for getting together is religion."

He pointed to the press, radio, magazines and movies as among the most powerful and effective means of breaking down the prejudices of Catholics and Protestants about each other.

Misunderstanding between Protestants and Catholics in the United States has decreased since colonial days, when it was common to persecute Catholics, Father Gavin said.

He pointed to the large number of Catholic converts in recent years as evidence of this.

"Occasionally things break out which bring to the surface misunderstandings which are still there, but it is not as bad as it used to be by a long shot," he declared.

Girl Found Strangled; Uncle Did it, Kills Self

Detroit, Aug. 24 (P).—Nine-year-old Barbara Jean Aberl was found strangled to death in a marsh near here last night. A blue jumper was knotted about her throat.

Her ne'er-do-well uncle, Arthur Mayer, 30, scrawled a suicide note relating he killed the girl to keep her from telling of his sex advances. His body was found in woods four miles away.

Mayer's note warned mothers to guard their daughters who become "sex conscious at a young age."

SEC Approves Capital Transit Stock Sale to Wolfson Group

The competitive bidding requirements of the SEC decision.

The stock to be sold represents 45.61 per cent of the 240,000 outstanding shares of Capital Transit. The sale also involves two subsidiaries of Capital Transit—Montgomery Bus Lines, Inc., and the Glen Echo Park Co.

On April 14, 1942, the SEC issued an order directing North American to sever its relationship with Capital Transit by disposing of its ownership and control of the transit securities.

In yesterday's decision, the SEC emphasized that "the contract of sale provides that the parties are to use diligence to obtain required orders . . . from the Interstate Commerce Commission prior to execution of the sale."

The Wolfson group already has made a down payment of $250,000 and the remainder is to be paid on or before November 1, 1949, if approval is obtained from the ICC.

U. S. School Roll Total Estimated

An estimated 32,671,500 students throughout the United States will pursue studies during the coming school year, Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing announced yesterday.

Services to Fire 135,000, Drop 12,073 Officers

DEFENSE—From Page 1 his midyear economic report July 11, repeatedly warned against reducing employment in such phrases as: "We cannot have prosperity by getting adjusted to the idea of a depression—by cutting investment or employment or wages or essential Government programs." And: "There is nothing healthy about more unemployment or less production . . ."

And again: "The way to check an increase in unemployment is to take a firmative action that will provide more jobs."

Hardest hit of the three services was the Navy, scheduled to lose 76,000 of 359,000 employees, or 21.2 per cent. The Army was next with 41,000 out of 377,000, or 10.9 per cent to be cut. Of 169,000 civilians employed by the Air Force, 18,000 or 10.7 per cent will be let out.

Johnson's announcement said that the Army already had reduced its civilian employees by some 8,000 since June, 1949, a number which would be included in the total of 41,000. The remaining 33,000, the announcement said, are to be fired by next November 1.

The Navy already has let go some 25,000 of the 76,000 it must cut. The balance of approximately 51,000 will be discharged by November 1.

As for the Air Force, the announcement did not enumerate any previous firings. It said: "The Air Force stated that hiring will be held to a minimum until the Air Force civilian reduction has been completed. When overseas Air Force installations are closed, native civilians will be released locally and United States citizens will be returned to this country. Some of the latter will be employed at domestic installations."

Calculations based on the total to be fired and the total allotted to each service show that the Navy's share amounts to 56.3 per cent of the lot; the Army loses 30.4 per cent, and the Air Force gives up 13.3 per cent.

Military personnel to be released by the three services will consist entirely of Reserve officers who will be returned to inactive status and officers commissioned from the ranks who will go back to enlisted or warrant grades. In the Army, 5787 officers, chiefly majors and above, will be released. The Navy will be reduced by 3157 and the Air Force by 3129.

Installations to be closed or reduced to caretaker status as a result of the employment cuts range from great navy yards and Army camps to small bases and airfields. These include:

Army—Camp Chaffee, Ark., recruit training center, to be closed by April 15, 1950; Camp Jackson, S. C., recruit training, closed by July 1, 1950; Camp Kilmer, N. J., staging area for the New York Port of Embarkation, closed by April 1, 1950.

Navy—Naval shipyard at Long Beach, Cal., to be inactivated and "considerable" reductions in force at 10 other yards and naval air stations. The Naval Academy College Preparatory School at Bainbridge, Md., will be closed.

Air Force—Eight bases to be inactivated, five declared surplus and two returned to the Army. Those inactivated but not declared surplus will be placed on caretaker status.

Reduction in strength from 54 to 48 groups and closing of bases will cause the Air Force to inactivate three fighter wings of three squadrons each, two light bomber squadrons, and one troop carrier wing of three squadrons. The last is now on duty with the Berlin airlift.

In addition, the First, Tenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Air Force headquarters will be moved from their present locations. Of seven Air Force bases in the Caribbean area, five will be inactivated, leaving only two.

Nine Air Force bases were cut down to a caretaker basis, with 12 men on duty at each. This includes bases at Colorado Springs, Colo., Orlando, Fla., Salina, Kans., and Bangor, Me.

The Army's Camp Chaffee, in Arkansas, is to be closed by next April 15. Camp Jackson, S. C., goes out next year; so do Camp Kilmer, N. J., Camp Ellis, Ill.,

PER CENT—From P. 1

Says Maragon 'Got in Hair'

The subcommittee will continue its probe into Maragon's affairs. Witnesses who have been called are George Chadwick, a Washington lawyer; Herbert Bertine, former WAA employee in New York, and Carmine Bellino, committee accountant.

Maragon is expected to be called after these three have testified.

At the outset of witness Major's testimony yesterday, he was asked about a telephone conversation he had with Hunt on June 8, 1948. A transcript of this taken down by a secretary, was found in Hunt's files in the Barr Building.

It showed that Major told Hunt about "a chap in New York" and some people who were interested in buying an Alcoa plant from WAA.

The transcript showed Major saying to Hunt:

"Apparently this chap in New York told them he would do everything he could. He wasn't working for nothing. He wanted a retainer. I do not know what he asked. They were down here to talk to me and asked me who else around town does this business."

He said there's a fellow named Jim Hunt. He gets things done around here. We all do what we can for him. I told him, however, it was entirely up to him. I told him that you click better than half the time . . . I don't see how anybody can talk past the people here and do what they want done."

Major said he recalled the telephone conversation, and admitted the transcript sounded about the way he talked, but he insisted the transcript was wrong where it had him saying that Hunt was a man "who gets things done around here" and that "we all do what we can for him."

Denies Initiative

He admitted he referred prospective clients to Hunt, but explained he did it only when they asked him to do it. He said he never did such a thing on his own initiative.

An earlier witness yesterday was Lieut. Gen. Edmund G. Gregory (retired) former War Assets Administrator. He was asked about an exchange of letters between himself and Hunt at the time Hunt was giving up his job as a $50-a-day special consultant with WAA.

On June 30, 1946, Hunt wrote Gregory and reminded him that he had once told him that there was no reason why he (Hunt) could not be a consultant to the head of WAA and to "other clients" as well, provided he was hired on a per diem basis and was not classified as a government employee.

General Gregory sent a letter to Hunt on July 3, 1946, which in effect confirmed this.

He showed "No Violation"

The letters were turned over to the committee earlier by Roger

White, Hunt's attorney, to show that Hunt had not violated any law when he accepted fees from individual clients while he was still working for WAA.

General Gregory said on the witness stand yesterday that, in his exchange with Hunt, he thought Hunt was talking about representing private clients "subsequent" to his government service.

He said he thought it was certainly "unethical" for Hunt, while serving as a WAA consultant, to carry on a side business representing people who wanted to buy Government surplus property.

It had been brought out earlier that Hunt accepted fees from private clients while he was with WAA, one of them being a $1000 fee from Albert Gross, Milwaukee manufacturer, who made the seven deep freezers that went to General Vaughan and his friends.

Feldman Testifies

The first witness yesterday was Maj. Gen. Henry Feldman, suspended Army Quartermaster General. He insisted, as he had the day before that his 1947 "confidential" letter to Hunt, which contained an Army buying program, did not give Hunt's clients an unfair advantage. He said the list of items was "harmless," since it was "tentative and fluid."

Feldman explained in detail the case of the 850,000 aerosol or insect bombs which the Army bought from War Assets, thereby relieving Pierre Welch and his associates of the obligation of buying them.

Welch testified Wednesday how he tried for three weeks to get out of buying the aerosol bombs, got nowhere, and then hired Hunt. He said Hunt solved his problem in a day and had all papers signed in three days.

General Feldman said yesterday that the Army's plan to buy the bombs was "an accomplished fact before Mr. Hunt came into the picture."

Hunt got $5000 from Welch, and Welch didn't complain.

Mayor Of Washington

During his period as chairman of the Senate District Committee, Senator J. Howard McGrath labored hard to abolish the reason for the honorary title he bore as "Mayor" of Washington. Congress had few more persistent supporters of home rule for the District, and with the magnitude of his other activities on the Finance and Judiciary Committees and as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, it is a wonder how he found time to do so much. Undoubtedly the fact that Senator McGrath was associated with the Democratic Committee helps account for the fact that this has been a big year for District legislation, despite the tabling of home rule in the House. Particularly to his credit is the rescue of Washington finances through passage of the long-delayed sales tax, a passage which he managed on the floor. He also struck a blow for common sense in his advocacy of permanent authorization for daylight saving time in the District. Senator McGrath's conscientiousness has given him an enviable record which it is to be hoped his successor, Senator Matthew M. Neely, will follow. As Mr. McGrath moves over to the Attorney Generalship, he deserves the thanks of Washington for services rendered.

Strikes Preferred

C. M. White, head of the Republic Steel Corp., told the Presidential Fact-Finding Board that there is no place for a board of its kind in our peacetime economy. If wage disputes can't be settled by direct bargaining between employers and employees, he thinks the principals should fight it out. "That," he said, "is the way I look at bargaining. If they (the unions) think we are wrong, they strike us. It is a hell of a good way to work it."

At least Mr. White deserves credit for the frankness of his statement. Unlike some other executives of the old school who oppose all forms of outside intervention, he has acknowledged that, without such intervention, the strike or the lockout is the only means of settling disputes when direct negotiations break down. The weakness of Mr. White's position lies not in its logic, which is unassailable, but in his failure to realize that there is a third party to disputes involving huge industrial concerns—the public. If strikes tie up a basic industry such as steel for any length of time, the entire Nation feels the effect. The losses suffered by the struck concerns and their employees are only part (often a minor part) of the total cost.

The industrial head of a large corporation who regards a dispute with his employees as a purely private contest to be settled in the last resort by the weapons of coercion—whether strikes or lockouts—is a holdover from the days when the effects of industrial warfare could be localized. Those days are gone forever. In the highly integrated industrial society of today the executive heads of such establishments owe it to the public to cooperate wholeheartedly in all attempts to effect a peaceful settlement of disputes between them and their employees.

Domingo Diaz

A staunch friend of the United States has just died in the person of President Domingo Diaz Arosemena of Panama. President Diaz had been chief executive of his country for too short a period—only nine months—to permit any detailed appraisal of his administration. Nonetheless, the government in his regime did conclude a civil air treaty with the United States which resulted in the use of Panama's new national airport by American carriers. Before he became President, Senor Diaz also showed his friendship for the United States during the unrest late in 1947 when Panama declined to grant air bases to this country. He remained an outstandingly calm figure in the prevailing anti-Americanism.

A lifelong member of the Liberal Party, Senor Diaz was elected President of Panama last summer in a campaign against former President Arnulfo Arias, who was a notorious pro-Nazi at the time of Pearl Harbor. President Diaz was a welcome contrast to his opponent. His political attachment was to the small farmers, and he liked to think of himself as a rural President, even to the extent of indulging his fondness for country dancing up to the time of his death. Senor Diaz also was an enthusiastic devotee of baseball, a taste picked up, perhaps, during his education in the United States. Although he lacked dynamic qualities and did not occupy precisely the position of an elder statesman, President Diaz was a veteran of Panama's struggle for independence and consistently retained the respect of his countrymen. We extend condolences to our Panamanian neighbors on their loss.

Arms For China

A certain section of the GOP seems to be itching to turn a fresh hunk of the taxpayers' money into arms for "Nationalist China." Senator Knowland talks about 100 million dollars of arms. He will doubtless seek to tack the handout onto the arms bill in the Senate. The like-minded with him in the House—94, we believe—would have settled for 75 million dollars. This was the amendment bearing the names of Representatives Lodge and Walter which was lost prior to the vote last Thursday on the arms bill. But either sum is a trifle for meeting the intended purpose—whether that purpose be to clean up the Communists in China or to conduct a holding operation in southern China.

Our authority is the latest on-the-spot witness, the senior officer of the American Army Advisory Group in Nanking till Nanking fell to the Communists, Maj. Gen. David Barr. This is what General Barr said in his last report:

Only a policy of unlimited United States aid, including the immediate employment of United States armed forces to block the southern advance of the Communists, which I emphatically do not recommend, would enable the Nationalist Government to maintain a foothold in southern China against a Communist advance.

Nothing could be plainer than General Barr's conclusion. Yet the "aid-to-China" school insists on keeping its eyes closed to this and other pertinent documentation in the White Paper. General Barr says that "unlimited aid" would be required either to stop or to clean up the Communists. He did not say 75 million dollars or 100 million dollars. It follows, then, that this money would not achieve its purpose—that is to say, the outlay would be stupid as well as wasteful.

Undoubtedly the United States is rich enough, or thinks it is rich enough, to afford both stupidity and waste. However, more is entailed than simply another Operation Rathafor for the United States—or another Operation Safehaven for busted middlemen in China. This would be a commitment to a policy of intervention in the internal affairs of China. It doesn't require any expert to see the consequences. Either there would be another declaration of bankruptcy for American policy on the model of last year's aid-to-China debacle or, what is far more likely, another and yet another plea for help till the Barr stage of "unlimited aid" had been reached.

Even before this stage had been reached, moreover, the intervention would inevitably invite very serious consequences for Americans in China. There are several thousand Americans left in China. Their lives are already in jeopardy, and there would be added danger for them as a result of any further military adventuring on the part of the United States. The prime essential of any foreign policy is to protect the lives of nationals abroad. In common decency, therefore, no such proposal as aid-to-China ought to be advanced till China has been evacuated of American nationals. Even the present chatter on Capitol Hill might set off an explosion there.

But honesty with the American people at home is required as well as decency to Americans in China. They cannot be expected to read the 1000-page White Paper on China. But they have a right to insist that their representatives shall read it. This, indeed, is required homework for legislators who presume to lay down the lines of a foreign policy that the Administration cannot recommend. It is time the sinogogues of the GOP stopped playing politics and think-of-a-number strategy about arms to China, and explored with the Administration the general outline of a policy toward China based on antiaggression instead of intervention. Specifically what we are going to do about Hongkong—Asia's Trieste—and Formosa and the safety of American lives in China? Policy before arms is needed in Asia as in Europe.

Absentee Obstruction

The House Labor and Education Committee met in two sections on Wednesday morning. One section convened in accordance with the Sims petition, signed by 12 Democratic and one Republican members of the committee, to override Chairman Lesinski's stubborn refusal to call such a meeting. Its purpose was to consider and if possible move out for floor vote some Federal aid to education bill.

But only 11 signers of the petition showed up. Representatives Morton, Republican, and Powell, Democrat, stayed away—which strikes us as a curious performance for anyone who so wanted the meeting as to defy its chairman—a performance that calls for explanation. Consequently there was no quorum, and the group could take no action at all. At least there was no quorum until after 12 o'clock, when the House convened and a legal committee session could not be held.

For at that time the other section of the committee arrived from its place of assembly in a neighboring room. These were the nonsigners of the petition, mostly Republican minority members plus chairman Lesinski. They had been sitting around a few feet down the hall, sending emissaries once in a while to see whether the Sims group had a quorum, and suggesting terms of agreement on legislation as the price of their own appearance.

Representative Sims was willing to agree not on the terms of a bill but on a guarantee of regular meetings of the committee after the House recess to consider aid-to-education legislation. To this the holdouts would not consent. So there was no quorum until after the 12 o'clock bell rang. Then they trooped in for an informal discussion of the subject—which likewise was fruitless.

These shenanigans make it pretty evident that the forces in the House opposed to any kind of Federal aid to education, or to any kind that does not satisfy their particular sectarian appetite, are determined to block any kind of action. The neat display of bipartisan obstructionism Wednesday morning prompts us to ask if the leaders on both sides of the House have not reached a secret agreement to keep the House from ever having a chance to vote on the subject.

The important thing, of course, is to get a bill to the floor. Our own feeling is that the Thomas bill, which has passed the Senate, should be accepted and probably would be accepted if the House had the chance to vote. But a compromise within constitutional limits would be preferable to no bill at all. And an opportunity for the House to vote on the matter is not only preferable but essential.

Favoritism

One can scarcely help feeling sorry about the predicament in which Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman finds himself. He enlisted in the United States Army as a private 42 years ago and progressed, apparently by merit, through every rank until he recently achieved his present eminence as chief of the Quartermaster Corps. He is entitled to be thoroughly proud of this record and to expect that it will be accorded weight against the serious charges on account of which he has now been temporarily relieved of his duties. It does not appear from these charges nor from the evidence concerning them presented to the Senate subcommittee investigating the activities of 5-percenters that he has been guilty of any venality. If, as the evidence indicates, he showed favoritism to James V. Hunt, he appears to have done so out of friendship or misguided zeal, rather than out of any expectation of advantage to himself. The injury he has done to his own career is thus the more lamentable.

Favoritism on the part of a Government official cannot be condoned no matter what its motivation. General Feldman appears to have given Mr. Hunt procurement plans of the Quartermaster Corps which, while not technically classified material, were not made available to other business representatives. He appears to have intervened in behalf of one of Mr. Hunt's clients with General MacArthur's headquarters and in behalf of another with the War Assets Administration. And he appears to have recommended Mr. Hunt as an agent to at least two prospective clients. However innocent may have been the intent behind these actions, they can scarcely be said to have constituted proper and prudent conduct on the part of a Quartermaster General.

One of the penalties of high public office is that it inhibits ordinary friendship. A Government official having responsibility as General Feldman did for a tremendous procurement program must avoid not only the actual taint of any improper influence but even the suspicion of such a taint. If he fails to do so, the morale of his agency will suffer and public confidence in it will be destroyed. General Feldman seems not quite to have lived up to the high standard of propriety which he very properly prescribed for the officials working under him.

Vacation For The House

No one who appreciates how hard most Congressmen work can begrudge a respite to members of the House. Judging from the growing number of absences, a good many Representatives have taken matters into their own hands despite the refusal of the Senate to accede to a resolution authorizing a House recess until September 21. The Senate refusal is more of a technicality than an actual impediment, for with the House meeting only every three days and an advance agreement to transact no business, most members probably will manage to get away for at least part of the period. Possibly the sight of their confreres slipping off to do a little fishing, political or otherwise, may influence Senators to get down to business on the mountain of unfinished matters still before them.

Despite the more obvious superfluity of talk in the Senate and the dilatoriness in passing appropriations, however, the House has by no means acquitted itself of everything on the calendar. The military public works bill, of great importance to the defense of Alaska, remains pigeonholed. Aid to education is still in controversy. The National Science Foundation bill is stuck in the Rules Committee. Moreover, the stopgap spending powers of agencies whose appropriations have not yet been finally approved, including the military establishment, expire on September 15. A possibility of considerable confusion would arise if a quorum of the House were not around to confirm Senate action by mid-September.

For that reason, the Senate probably was wise in disapproving a formal vacation for the House. Nevertheless, the prolongation of the congressional session is highly unsatisfactory, and the Senate vote against the Capehart resolution to adjourn both houses by September 30 is a disheartening, though probably realistic, commentary on the amount of work still ahead. More than anything, the sluggishness of Congress probably reflects the complexity of modern government. Discipline and a determination to meet deadlines, however, could prevent a good many of the unnecessary delays, especially on appropriations. Beyond this, Congress could avoid summer jam-ups by frankly recognizing the futility of the July 31 adjournment called for in the Reorganization Act, and by recessing through the summer and reconvening in the fall during nonelection years.

Letters To The Editor

Washington Sold Short

The tabling of the home rule bill by the House District Committee was a victory for the forces of reaction and a defeat for freedom. The failure was symptomatic, in one sector of public affairs, of the moral crisis of our time.

The true test of freedom is in its use. These faithless politicians have denied us our political freedom because they fear the consequences of its use. By their continued resistance to our just demands, they tend to destroy our image of America, our faith in representative government, our sense of unity with our fellow Americans.

These committeemen had it within their power, at a critical moment in history, to restore local self-government to the people of Washington—a right which the Founding Fathers had promised and to which our entire tradition committed them; but they did not do it.

There are no insuperable technical or administrative obstacles to home rule for Washington. American cities have had half a century's experience with the manager form of government. The home rule bills have been expertly drawn and matured after long hearings and full consideration of all viewpoints. The real obstacle is the obstacle of will, not of method or mechanism.

In this case it is not the people but the politicians who have failed. In local and national polls, in countless petitions, testimonials, and memorials the people have avowed their will and purpose. But the politicians have ignored our will, tabled our hopes.

Unless reversed, their decision will drive another nail in the coffin which the forces of reaction are building for democracy and freedom in America. They have sold the people of Washington short. Can they do that to us?

WINTHROP GREENE.
Washington.

Fr. R. Rush Rankin

Your August 21 account of the death of Fr. R. Rush Rankin does not mention something which comes to me from my association with him. In the Bois de Lemmes, where the 47th Infantry and other elements of the Fourth Division were on the Sunday before the Meuse-Argonne offensive in World War I, Father Rankin held mass. Along with many non-Catholics I attended.

Owing to military occupation the only available woods could be used just partially for the religious services. So Father Rankin directed that those who would have to stand in the open cut themselves branches from the trees and hold the branches over themselves for the service. As we returned from the service one of the group (and I wish I had been I) said "Birmingham Wood has moved again." Father Rankin had the respect of everybody I knew who knew him. He was the kind of person who by his actions rather than by his words gave religion a universality. He was a typical American Catholic, as especially men who were not Catholics had the privilege to know and who for that contact have reason to believe that American Catholics are Americans. RALPH THOMPSON.

"The Inside Man"

On August 14, you wrote in your editorial, The Inside Man, that the Government was at fault in the recent "5-percenter" inquiries. You have made a slight oversimplification. Our Government is not a single thing. It is a collection of many conflicting individuals and groups: our Government is rarely unified. Therefore, it is not the Government or the system that is wrong, but certain parts of this system which are wrong. Those Government officials who work outside the laws of ethical practice, those who cater to businessmen to make use of "loopholes," and the businessmen who use them with full perception of their acts: these are the groups at fault.

Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Who is to blame? In the final analysis, it is you and I and our law-abiding neighbors who are at fault for allowing these conditions to exist. Why search for scapegoats? We are our own frustrators. We're all to blame—not that intangible, vague, many-faceted creation called "Government."

EDWARD L. TOTTLE,
Washington.

Crippled Rent Control

Apparently the real estate lobby is doing very well in a subtle way. The Congress does not appropriate money for rent control.

What is to happen to a number of people who are so busy with their jobs that there is not time for subtleties? They are going to find themselves unable to pay for shelter.

CONSTANCE N. HUTCHINSON.

"Gone With The Wind"

The tepid, not to say grudging, tone attained by your August 17 editorial on the recent death of Margaret Mitchell must have occasioned a good deal of dissatisfaction among a large segment of your readers, and not all of the Southern element. One could almost suppose from the tenor of your disparagement that these editorial confreres of Miss Mitchell either were jealous of her success, or afraid to give voice to honest appreciation of what the rest of the world looks upon as a great achievement.

For Gone With The Wind is looked upon by millions of readers in many languages around the world as the greatest single literary achievement of any American writer. And not only by the people of modest taste and learning, some of the most brilliant minds of Europe share their view. In 1938, scarcely two years after Miss Mitchell's book appeared, Dr. Amos E. Taylor, former director of the old Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, had occasion to visit London to discuss international finance with Sir Montague Norman, the distinguished head of the Bank of England. During their private luncheon Dr. Taylor sat literally spellbound listening to the outpourings of that prodigiously erudite and profound mind. Finance was forgotten as Sir Montague discoursed upon up-to-date and notable phases of American political figures, past and present, science, art, literature, offering details of which the visitor from the United States would have had to confess himself almost ignorant.

Finally, taking advantage of a slight pause in the spate of wisdom, Dr. Taylor felt that he should say something to take him out of the nonentity class: "Well, Sir Montague," he asked, thinking of the title of a recently issued book by Clyde B. Davis, "have you also read The Great American Novel?"

G. A. R. Heirs

I have before me a clipping of a recent news story headed: "Commander Urges V. F. W. Take Over as Successor to G. A. R."

Dated Gettysburg, Pa., it reads: "National Commander Lyall T. Beggs of the Veterans of Foreign Wars said today the V. F. W. is a natural heir to the G. A. R."

"I believe it would be altogether proper if the V. F. W. would undertake to keep the records and preserve and protect the memorials and traditions of the Grand Army of the Republic," said Beggs. His speech was delivered at ceremonies sponsored by the Gettysburg V. F. W. Post marking the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"Declaring that the G. A. R. 'will hold its last annual convention at Indianapolis this fall,' Beggs said that would leave the V. F. W. as the oldest major veterans' organization in the United States."

I want to inform your paper and Commander Beggs, that his organization, has no premise on which it can claim heir to any right whatsoever of the Grand Army of the Republic. The Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War are the heirs apparent to the Grand Army of the Republic, and as such will have and claim their rights as such.

"Gone With The Wind"

The great man replied instantly. "Oh, yes. I've read Gone With The Wind several times."

Of course it is out of drawing if not more, to compare Margaret Mitchell and her book with Tolstoy, one of the giants of the 19th Century. Miss Mitchell was no comparable craftsman, but her characters are alive. The incidents in which they take part—there is no other word for it—"move." Every one of them, the lesser alike with the larger—Scarlett, Rhett Butler, Miss Pittypat, Will Benteen, Frank Kennedy, Uncle Porky—step out of the book and walk along companionably with every man or woman deeply rooted in America's soil, be he Southern or Northern.

Gone With The Wind is an epic of a people, the common people of the South—although the best-provided ones of them thought of themselves as the "aristocracy," a word they had borrowed from England and fitted to themselves, and they admired themselves in it even when it had little relevancy to their actual condition. They were not the glamorous Virginia knights of chivalry living in a never-never land, as portrayed by Thomas Nelson Page and others, but a simple, suffering, heroic people, whose story Miss Mitchell spread out on paper, without malice, exaggeration or pretense, for all to see. Her craftsmanship may not have been great, but it is adequate; her sincerity grand; her intense human understanding appealing to human nature the world over.

It is these qualities which have sold her book and made mock of her critics. Her book will be remembered, and read, when others lauded to high heaven will have been out of print for untold years.

'U. S. Look' On The March

By Malvina Lindsay

Clothes Craze

FASHION SHOWS, now beginning their fall season, hope to draw even bigger houses than they did last spring when the rush to this form of entertainment was phenomenal.

As firmly established as the cocktail party, the fashion show is now extending its orbit by way of television, and is reaching into the county fair circuit to compete with the pies and the pigs. It is having growing influence on American life, even causing some warnings abroad about the "U. S. Look."

These clothes spectacles have become such a big part of merchandising that some department stores in large cities spend from $15,000 to $20,000 a year on their store shows alone. In addition they provide shows for organizations. For the fashion show has invaded all gatherings, including those of sober thinkers. Many groups find it the most painless way of extracting money from the public for causes.

The fashion show also has helped develop the new feminine (as yet) occupation of modeling, which has superseded even the stage in glamour, and which is sending flocks of girls to New York all hopeful of ultimately having their photographs in national magazines. The "vanity racket" on the part of certain model schools is causing some stern warnings to be sent girls in the hinterland.

THE FASHION show craze continues to puzzle sociologists. At a time when consumers are watching their money closely its popularity is unabated. Even men are being increasingly drawn into it as judges, occasional models and as spectators. Eventual fashion showings of men's clothes are predicted.

Possibly the fashion show provides to many of its spectators the same vicarious thrill as a movie romance. Women with leisure time all hope of being generally well-dressed Americans are frequently past wearing the size 12 models generally displayed. Many of them do not live the kind of lives requiring the costume "show pieces" exhibited. Yet they may see themselves as the slim, slithering, gyrating models. Or they may "get ideas." They may just enjoy looking at clothes.

One result of national preoccupation with fashion shows should be more sprucing up, or what fashion experts call "smarter dressing" on the part of Americans. As it is, foreign visitors frequently marvel at how generally well-dressed Americans are, at the importance of appearance in the business and social scene, and at the absorbing interest of American women in dress and grooming.

"I thought at first," recently remarked a visiting European woman intellectual, "that American women were sex crazy because they gave so much attention to their looks. But now I realize they have to do it to get and hold jobs, husbands, social esteem."

IF THE fashion show now gets a big hand in the living room, as well as in the hotel and store, it may mean the end of the peas-in-a-pod look of Americans. Mass production of clothing has been the primary cause of this, but social emphasis on what "they" are wearing has helped. Television fashions may nudge more persons into keeping up with the "theys."

The "U. S. Look" has frequently been criticized abroad for its standardization. London designers recently objected to its regimentation. The Soviet Union now going in for increasing emphasis on fashions, announced that its women would not be encouraged to become "dolls or puppets" in the Western manner.

Yet the "U. S. Look" has its points for those foreigners who work, travel, lead active lives. Mrs. Vyaya Lakshmi Pandit, Indian Ambassador to this country, wears a sari, the Indian womanly well-don kimono at home are wearing Western dress in their working life.

At any rate the "U. S. Look" seems destined to become even more uniform. The Twentieth Century Fund in its recent prophetic survey America's Needs and Resources, predicts that wardrobes of all Americans, rich and poor alike, will become increasingly similar because of movies, mail order catalogues, mass production of new inexpensive materials and a general change from cumbersome to lightweight functional clothes.

Segregation's Toll

On August 16, as I was driving by Sherwood Playground at 9th and G st. n.e., a little 5-year-old colored boy came dashing after his ball and ran into the side of my car.

At the hospital I asked his father why the boy was playing outside the playground and not inside. He answered that his little boy wants to play inside but is not being permitted because of the color of his skin. He said further that his little boy sneaks over and plays just outside on the narrow sidewalk, where he can be near the children, swings, and play that he yearns to play with. It was from that narrow sidewalk that the child ran into my car.

Why must innocent children suffer and be hurt physically as well as emotionally by undemocratic policies in this heart of the world's democracy?

Tito Is No Friend, Despite His Troubles

By Constantin Fotitch

Former Ambassador of Yugoslavia

ON AUGUST 17, the years after five American airmen were deliberately shot down over Yugoslavia, Tito was finally granted a license to fly and export from this country a steel blooming mill, vital needed to turn out rails and other structural steel products essential to the program of recovery of his country.

This decision was hailed by Mr. Marquis Childs in his column of August 15 as a "deliberate and calculated policy in the interest of world peace" which will help Tito in maintaining his independence in the face of over-mountainous threats of Soviet Russia.

Mr. Childs blames the Yugoslav exiles in this country for brushing aside impatiently this reasoning, being one of those exiles I wish to point out why we are fighting and why we have preferred the uncertain life of exile to returning to our homeland ruled by Communist despots.

IT IS an injustice to impute to us that we are cherishing the dream that the past will be restored by the conquering armies of the West, spearheaded by the United States of America—a hope we do not dare express openly. We are conscious of the shortcomings of prewar Yugoslavia which were common in other national states created after World War I.

However, the last accusation to be made about Yugoslavia is that it had a feudal regime. An extensive agrarian reform carried out immediately after World War I had greatly solved the problem of the distribution of land and abolished the last vestige of feudalism in the provinces liberated from Austro-Hungarian and Ottoman rule.

In Serbia proper—the most important part of Yugoslavia, which had already enjoyed freedom for almost a century—the land reform had been carried out in accordance with the liberation of the country from the Ottoman Empire. The much publicized provision of the Yugoslav Communist constitution that "the land should belong to those who cultivate it" was realized in Serbia in 1936, long before Marx's Communist Manifesto.

No one of us is fighting—or secretly wishing—to see the broken pieces of the past forged together again into the old mold. We are aware of the political and social transformations in Yugoslavia since World War II and of the Communist dictatorship which ensued. But we are equally certain that these events have only increased the inborn feelings of the Serbs, as well as of other peoples of Yugoslavia, for freedom, democracy and the respect for human dignity.

FROM THE very first day when it became apparent that the Nazi tyranny would be replaced by a Communist dictatorship we have been fighting for freedom and democracy in our country and for the rights of our people to choose freely the institutions and the government under which they wish to live. We are fighting for the restoration of political and personal liberties so that our people may decide freely for themselves the social and political reforms which they want in their country.

We are fighting against a regime which has suppressed every expression of free opinion, every critic of its action, a regime which is trying to impose a spiritual regimentation, and maintains itself in power by the ruthless method of its secret police. We are fighting for the right to return as free men in a free country where we will be ready to answer for our actions while in exile before a free people and not before Communist-packed courts whose sentences are decided by the party even before the trial starts.

Besides the political leaders there are nearly 80,000 Serbs, most of them former prisoners of war, who also have preferred the hard life of exile to living in a country ruled by dictators. In this fight for freedom we are greatly encouraged by the unanimous support of those "little men" who come from every walk of life of the Serbian nation.

IT IS the resistance of the people to his regime which has forced Tito to revise his timetable for the communication of the country. This is one of the main reasons for his split with Moscow, which does not admit any exceptions to the highly centralized system of communism.

Tito and his group did not become nationalists and defenders of the country's independence overnight. Their subservience to Moscow was clearly demonstrated in the statement of Tito's principal adviser, Edward Kardelj, vice president of the Council and Foreign Minister, made to the Soviet Ambassador on June 5, 1945.

Acknowledging the correctness of Soviet criticism of the speech Tito made in connection with Trieste, Kardelj asked the Soviet Ambassador that "the Soviet Union not regard them (Yugoslav Communist Party) as representatives of another country but as representatives of one of the future Soviet republics (italics mine) and the Communist Party of Yugoslavia as a part of the all-Union Communist Party." (Soviet-Yugoslav dispute, correspondence page 37.)

It is without parallel for a vice president of the government of an independent nation speaking to an ambassador of a foreign power officially to admit that his policy is to betray the independence of the nation of which he is supposed to be a guardian. Tito and Kardelj may have changed their feelings toward Moscow as the result of their bitter and prolonged conflicts with the Cominform. But it is hard to believe that the Serbs, who have shown in both World Wars what sacrifices they are capable of in order to defend their freedom and independence, could have in any way changed their feelings toward Tito and Kardelj, neither of whom is one of their own. Nor could they consider the Communist Party which Kardelj wanted the Soviets to look upon "as a part of the all-Union Communist Party" to be a national party of Yugoslavia.

DURING this conflict the national elements of Yugoslavia which undoubtedly represent the overwhelming majority of the country have remained aloof from the quarrel which has become a family affair. It is true that the conflict with the Cominform has demonstrated the difficulties which the Communist Party has encountered in making Yugoslavia a vassal state of the Soviets. Such difficulties have also been experienced by the Communist Parties of other countries behind the curtain like Poland, Bulgaria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

But it is not the fault of the Communist leaders if they have failed in their task of bringing their country under complete Soviet domination. In pursuing this policy they have met a testis of the people which they underestimated at the very time the Red Army installed them in power.

It is true also that the conflict with the Cominform has weakened the Soviet grip over Yugoslavia and, by repercussion, over other "people's democracies." The longer this conflict lasts the more it will widen the holes in the iron curtain. Meantime, it weakens both sides—the Soviets as well as Tito.

Undoubtedly, in the cold war between the East and West, such a situation is all to the advantage of the Western democracies. Therefore, it is natural that so opportunity should be missed to see this conflict prolonged. But it would be a mistake to believe that those Communist heretics have changed in any way their feelings toward the Western democracies. They remain resolute enemies of the Western world, just as they continue to enforce their dictatorial methods.

Consequently, for our people, as well as for ourselves, it is perfectly irrelevant under what label communism operates—Russian, or so-called national communism.

They will remain enemies of the Western world because even a dissident communism must stay on the Communist road if it wishes to keep control over its partisans. They must justify their dictatorship with some ideological reasons; otherwise they would risk alienating many from their already shaken ranks.

For years Tito's followers have been fed with a relentless propaganda against the Western democracies. Even today when he is making overtures to the West to save himself and his regime from impending economic collapse, the favorite theme of his propaganda is the attack of Western capitalists, monopolists, warmongers, etc., although less vociferously. No longer ago than July 5, 1949, a conference of senior officials of all Yugoslav broadcasting stations held in Zagreb under the auspices of the government set as its program, among others, "to support the anti-imperialist policy of our government by unmasking the Western warmongers and imperialists."

IT WOULD BE a mistake to believe that in spite of the conflict with the Cominform the Western democracies could induce Tito to political collaboration. The closure of Greek-Yugoslav frontiers was quoted as a change in Tito's attitude and policy, but this was done purely out of self-defense, since Zachariades is an obedient servant of the Cominform and could be a menace to Tito in this very important area.

In the cold war the best assets of the Western democracies are the national forces in Yugoslavia as well as in other countries under Communist dictatorship. In spite of all their deceptions they remain faithful to the ideals of freedom and democracy and Steel Strike In The Offing?

WHILE the shadow it casts today is hardly more than a small headline on the financial page, the coming of a steel strike seems to be clearly and definitely spelled out. It is written large in the voluminous record being assembled before the steel companies agreed to put their case in opposition to a fourth round wage increase before a presidential board. They had heard rumors that the board would be stacked against them and they were afraid of getting caught in a trap from which they could not free themselves. This helps to explain why they have spent so much time denouncing the technique of a fact-finding board and asserting their independence of it.

But there is another and perhaps more compelling reason. It goes back to the Senate hearings on the Taft-Hartley Act early in this session of Congress.

Every shade of business from big to little and back again was represented at those hearings in adamant opposition to any change in the law. But the steel industry took relatively little part in this defensive campaign.

AS A result there was considerable resentment in the count to the principles solemnly proclaimed by the Western democracies. Should the cold war "turn into a shooting war—and this eventually cannot be entirely discounted—those national forces would be a powerful factor which would make the position of the Soviets and their Communist satellites untenable.

In a country like Yugoslavia the Communists, who are a small minority of the population, have succeeded in maintaining themselves in power through the terror of the secret police. But in case of a national emergency no dictator could force the Serbs into a policy to which they are opposed. This was evidenced in World War II when the Serbian people overthrew the government which had signed the tripartite pact that was to have brought Yugoslavia into the camp of the Axis. Likewise, Tito, even with all the resources of secret police, could not force the Serbs and other people of Yugoslavia to fight against the Western democracies.

It would be a pity and a loss for democracy to sacrifice a faithful and traditional ally for the sake of the more than problematic friendship of a dictator who, above all, is fighting for his personal role and to maintain himself in power.

Between two such monopolies

cils of business that are dedicated to keeping Taft-Hartley, or a reasonable facsimile, on the law books. Steel executives were considered craven-hearted, sissy. They had failed to step into the breach in a time of peril.

The horrid suspicion grew up that steel had sold out to the unions. Business executives who had led the fight for Taft-Hartley could gloat in triumph when the Republican-Southern Democratic coalition stopped the effort to repeal or even reshape the act that is so hated by organized labor.

But the steel executives now are standing up to the CIO Steelworkers Union. To their defense the other day came Ira Mosher, former president of the National Association of Manufacturers and one of the most ardent and active champions of Taft-Hartley.

If the steel dispute goes to a strike, then sooner or later the President would have to invoke the emergency clause of the Taft-Hartley law. A steel strike that ran beyond three or four weeks would have serious consequences in an economy wavering between a further downturn and a leveling off at the present rate of high production and employment. Having been forced to use the emergency provision of the law, the President would be demonstrating how essential it is to keep such a shotgun behind the door. Or so his action would be interpreted by the loyal friends of Taft-Hartley.

A SECOND, and many would say a fourth round wage increase, granted by the steel industry would set a pattern for most of the rest of industry. The steel executives who have been denouncing the union and the presidential board are keenly aware of that responsibility.

Enders M. Voorhees, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corp., blamed the steelworkers' drive for pensions and higher wages on "the bitter race for power of giant labor monopolies." He was talking about John L. Lewis, who got generous pensions for his United Mine Workers by his usual high-handed tactics.

Lewis is now demonstrating his powers as a monopolist by allowing the coal mines to remain open only three days a week. Rivalry between Lewis and Philip Murray of the steelworkers is certainly a factor. A steel man who sees his neighbor, a coal miner, getting more than he does is bound to feel dissatisfied.

But it would seem to be dubious strategy for an industry that has given so much evidence of close control to talk about monopolies. Which came first, the egg of the business monopoly or the chicken of the labor monopoly, is an argument that, once started, can reach back a long way.

Between two such monopolies

Mrs. Roosevelt Reveals Talk With Spellman

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 24 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Francis Cardinal Spellman, who a month ago engaged in a controversy over Federal aid to education, had a friendly chat here last Friday.

The former first lady revealed today in her newspaper column "My Day" that the cardinal paid a surprise visit to her Friday at the Roosevelt family estate.

It was the first personal meeting between the two since the cardinal attacked Mrs. Roosevelt for her opposition to Federal aid for private and parochial schools. Two weeks ago, however, they had exchanged telephone calls and issued joint statements which appeared to end any personal bitterness.

Dedicated Chapel

The prelate, Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York, drove to Hyde Park on a trip to dedicate a chapel at Peekskill, N. Y., Hyde Park is 38 miles beyond Peekskill.

Today, Mrs. Roosevelt described the visit in two paragraphs of her column.

"The other afternoon as I was signing mail with side glances out my window, and I am afraid my thoughts centered on how quickly I could get out for a swim, Miss (Malvina) Thompson came upstairs to my desk, looking somewhat breathless, and said, 'Mrs. Roosevelt, Cardinal Spellman is on the porch and he wants to see you.'"

"The cardinal had dropped in on his way to dedicate a chapel in Peekskill. We had a pleasant chat and I hope the country proved as much a tonic for him as it always is for me."

Miss Thompson, Mrs. Roosevelt's personal secretary, said the visit took place on the estate's Val-Kill cottage.

"The cardinal stopped by in his own car," she said. "He had a monsignor with him, and he met Mrs. Roosevelt."

"She offered him some iced tea, and he took a little. The cardinal stayed about 45 minutes. It was just a friendly conversation."

Mrs. Roosevelt declined to amplify the remarks in her column. The cardinal's office said it had no comment.

The visit added a more personal touch to the formal friendly exchange of telephone calls and issuance of statements two weeks ago.

On the latter occasion, the cardinal restated his position and said his only concern was in the matter of "auxiliary services" to schools, be they private or public. He referred specifically to such matters as pupil transportation and lunches.

In the companion statement, Mrs. Roosevelt reaffirmed her own views but termed the cardinal's statement "clarifying" and "fair."

Last month the cardinal had issued a sharp statement attacking Mrs. Roosevelt's views on the separation of church and state in her writings on the Barden bill for Federal aid to education. He accused her of "anti-Catholic bias" and views "unworthy of an American mother."

The former First Lady denied any bias, but insisted on her right to discuss the subject publicly. Later, their statements tended toward a common ground, although there has been no indication that they see eye-to-eye on the aid question.

Mrs. Roosevelt resumed her newspaper discussion of the bill yesterday without mentioning the controversy. She took up the matter of Federally-financed "auxiliary services," which the cardinal wants for parochial as well as public schools.

"I think a good argument can be made for transportation where any free schools are concerned, whether they are public or private," she wrote in her column.

"Some private schools are asking that if Federal funds are given for these auxiliary services anywhere in the country, they shall be given to both public and private schools."

"This is a question which it may not be necessary to decide for some time to come if we make up our minds that Federal funds shall go toward equalizing the opportunity for education throughout the Nation in the three most important ways I have already mentioned (safe buildings, equalized school year, uniform teachers' salaries).

the public is likely to find the going pretty rough. If steel moves from the financial page to the front page with a strike in mid-September, then we shall discover that the argument in New York was pretty important, after all.

Southern Members of House Oppose Idea of District Rule

Robert L. Ramsay (D., W. Va.). "You ought to have your own government. Certainly I'd vote for it. I'm tired of spending a day a week on city affairs."

Harley O. Staggers (D., W. Va.). "I would be for a home rule bill."

M. G. Burnside (D., W. Va.). "I'm in favor of District citizens voting on local issues. I think they have that right as American citizens. Voting is one of the cardinal principles of America—I've taught that for many years in the schools."

Three members from the area were not recorded on last year's home rule roll calls and two others divided their votes. Checked this time, three are opposed (Spence, D. Ky.; Whitaker, D. Ky., and Short, R. Mo.), one is noncommittal (Stigler, D. Okla.) and the fourth is for home rule (Kee, D. W. Va.).

Three members could not be reached for comment: Irving (D. Mo.), Welch (D. Mo.) and Bailey (D. W. Va.).

2 Favor Principle

Of the 15 new House members from the 11 Southern States, two said they favor the home rule principle. They are: Carl Elliott (D., Ala.). "My feeling is that the District of Columbia ought to have home rule since it comprises nearly a million people. If I get a chance, I'm going to vote for it."

Charles E. Bennett (D., Fla.). "I've never made a thorough study of it though I'm in favor of home rule in principle. I think the people here are entitled to elect their own officials and have representatives in Congress. Maybe you should try a delegate in the House first, on that."

Only one new member, James B. Hare (D., S. C.) said he was flatly opposed. Eleven others said they were undecided and noncommittal and a twelfth could not be reached.

Of the 12 House members from the South who did not vote or divided their votes on home rule last year, one said he now favors it, six were noncommittal and five others could not be reached.

In favor was J. Vaughan Gary (D., Va.) who represents the city of Richmond. He said: "So far as I know now, I'm for home rule. And I see no reason why I should not support it."

Capital Store Sales Up 3% In 7 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman
Dollar volume of Washington department store sales increased 9 per cent in July and for the first seven months this year was 3 per cent higher than in the same 1948 period.

Since the sales tax went into effect on August 1, dollar volume has been trending lower. For the week ended August 6, sales of six leading department stores here were 15 per cent lower. The drop was 15 per cent in the week ended August 13.

Extent of the sales drop in other parts of the Fifth Reserve District during July and the first seven months this year is indicated by these figures from the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond (percentage decrease, July and seven months respectively):

Maryland 13 and 6; Virginia 5 North Carolina 10 and 9; South Carolina 5 and 1.

CREDIT: The "no down payment" trend, evident in many cities, is not prevalent in Washington, according to the Electric Institute. Although a few stores here offer terms below 10 per cent down, most of them hold close to 20 per cent. The length of time allowed for payment, however, has generally been extended recently, the Institute said.

ODD LOTS: A grass-roots campaign to acquaint people with investments has been started by Reynolds & Co. Wall Street brokerage, with a financial exhibit at the Morris County Fair in New Jersey, first of its kind in a farm atmosphere.

Signs of the times: Republic Steel Corp. is sending a senior vice president to Europe and the near east to hunt business. Lincoln Service Corp., Washington industrial banking firm, declared regular dividends on all classes of stock payable September 12 to stock of record August 31.

DUN & BRADSTREET wholesale food price index this week dipped to $5.86, the first downturn since the week of July 6.

BANK FIGURES: Highlights of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's weekly report on 17 member Washington banks:

STEEL OUTLOOK: The Iron Age, influential journal of the steel industry, has some encouraging comments on this basic industry. "The better tone in the steel market is still here this week," the magazine said. "It looks as though it would last for many more weeks to come, barring strikes. A lot of steel people are surprised at the upturn even though it has been moderate." And, the trade publication stated, "Most buying now is based on business confidence rather than strike fears."

NEW ISSUES: The Securities and Exchange Commission reported that corporations offered more than $2,300,000,000 of new securities during the second quarter of 1949. The securities included $1,900,000,000 of bonds, notes and debentures, 270 million dollars of common stock and 140 million dollars of preferred stock. Offerings by utility companies amounted to $1,400,000,000 of the total. It was the highest quarterly volume of equity issues since the last quarter of 1947.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: E. A. Korchow, president of the Hat Research Foundation, will explain here today promotion plans for National Hat Week (October 2 to 8). He will address men's wear and department store groups at offices of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Mrs. Evelyn Jarvis Murray, manager of the Government Information Bureau of the Standard of Detroit Group, just celebrated her 25th year with the insurance company. Wilder M. Morrison has been appointed director of personnel for Butler Brothers.

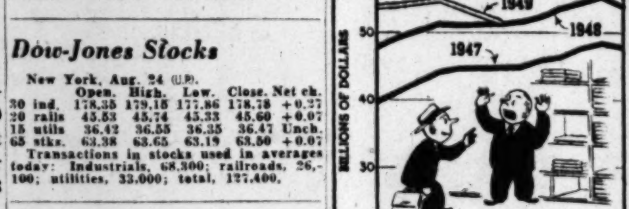

EARNINGS: McKesson & Robbins, Inc., reported net income of $2,760,345 or $4.87 a common share for the fiscal year ended June 30, compared with $2,798,196 or $4.99 a share in the previous year. Other earnings reports:

Nudge Higher In Slow Trade

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—The stock market landed on its feet today after stumbling downward for three days straight. Demand for stocks was not exactly impressive. A mild pickup in buying, interest, though, plus a slackening in selling pressure, were enough to nudge ahead a variety of key shares.

The market was slow-gaited from start to finish. At the opening changes were indecisive. Gradually prices started to edge ahead, with some minor losses converted into small gains and small gains extended. Off and on during the day it seemed possible that a man-sized rally might get rolling but there was no following through to the buying.

Closing prices, nevertheless, were the best for the day in most cases. Turnover amounted to only 720,000 shares, against 840,000 yesterday.

Today's steadiness followed a three-day decline which reached a climax yesterday when the market took the sharpest spill since mid-June.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained .1 of one point at 64. The utility group was unchanged but the industrial and rail sections inched forward.

American telephone recovered 1/4 at 144 1/2 after losing 1 1/2 Tuesday. Garrett Corp., makers of plane engines and equipment, added 1/4 at 13 1/2 in the wake of an extra dividend. Swift International, which hit against Tuesday's trend for a small gain, moved up 1/8 to 10 1/8.

Anderson-Prichard Oil touched a high for the year at 25 1/2, a gain of 1/2, and Richfield Oil moved up 1/4 to 38 1/2. Both issues were fairly active.

Business loans increased during the week ended Aug. 17 for the third time in a four-week period, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

A $33 million rise in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans raised the total outstanding Aug. 17 to $12,930,000,000.

That put business loans $113 million above the 1948 low point reached on Aug. 3 in a history-making downward jump that lasted almost seven consecutive months.

The Aug. 7 total was still $1,933,000,000 below that of the same time last year.

Real estate loans increased another $5 million during the week to a record high of $4,166,000,000. They were $272 million above a year ago.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 24 (AP)—A last-minute flurry of buying lifted the grain market today. Everything except soybeans and July wheat, which had problems of its own to meet, ended with gains after a sluggish early session.

There was no news developments to account for the late buying. It seemed to come mainly from pit traders who had sold earlier in the day. There was talk that the Commodity Credit Corporation would buy a little more cash wheat today, but official figures won't be ready until tomorrow.

Wheat closed 1/2 lower to 1/4 higher, corn was 1/4 to 1 cent higher, oats were 1/4 higher, soybeans were 1/4 to 1 cent lower, and hard wheat 1/4 to 1 cent higher.

SINCLAIR OFFERS YOU SENSATIONAL NEW ANTI-RUST GASOLINE

CONTAINS RD-119*

New Sinclair Scientific Discovery That Stops Rust

that
RD-119 Stops Rust

RUSTED IN ORDINARY GASOLINE—This steel rod is heavily coated with rust after immersion in ordinary gasoline for only 48 hours in prescribed laboratory test. In test, a small proportion of water was added to the gasoline, because all gasoline contains minute quantities of water caused by moisture condensation.

RD-119—GREATEST GASOLINE DEVELOPMENT IN YEARS

PROTECTED IN NEW SINCLAIR GASOLINE—This steel rod shows no rust after immersion in Sinclair Gasoline containing RD-119 in test identical to one at left. In the same way, RD-119 in the new Sinclair Gasoline stops rust and corrosion in the gasoline tank and fuel system of your car.

ONLY SINCLAIR GIVES YOU THIS PROTECTION

Both give you Anti-Rust Protection plus Top Gasoline Performance

While stopping rust, RD-119 has no effect whatsoever on the power, fast acceleration and long mileage you get with Sinclair Gasoline. Prove this for yourself by testing Sinclair Ethyl or Sinclair H-C Gasoline in your car today.

STOPS RUST IN GASOLINE TANKS
STOPS RUST WHICH CLOGS FUEL LINES,
STRAINERS, CARBURETOR JETS
REDUCES WEAR ON PRECISION PARTS

Why You Need Anti-Rust Gasoline. Rust and corrosion attack your car's fuel system. That's because all gasolines contain minute quantities of water caused by moisture condensation. As a result, rust attacks your gasoline tank. Non-ferrous parts of the fuel system corrode. Abrasive rust particles cause wear on precision parts of fuel pump and carburetor. The new miracle chemical, RD-119, in Sinclair Gasoline, coats the inside of your car's fuel system with an invisible protective layer that prevents rust and corrosion. *Trade Mark trustworthiness is in the slightest doubt.

The Russian intention, according to western sources, is to continue the transplantation of population until its borders with the west are peopled with thoroughly indoctrinated Communists.

Military Men Tell Tito They'll Fight Any foe

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 24 (AP).—The air force and the future leaders of Yugoslavia's best army units pledged to fight today against any aggression.

There seemed little likelihood this country's offer to settle her row with Russia over Communist politics would ease the tension soon.

Foreign observers believed the feud had gone too far and too deep, particularly since Yugoslavia has clearly stated she is not going to climb down from her position of independence from Moscow in domestic and foreign affairs.

The Moscow press continued to attack Marshal Tito furiously Wednesday. So far it had not printed or commented on the Yugoslav note of Tuesday offering to negotiate "all disputed questions."

(The Soviet army newspaper published a cartoon depicting the Yugoslav Premier as a blood-thirsty dog, paws dripping with blood and reaching for a sack of Wall Street gold.)

Yugoslavia denied officially tonight any part in a purported plot to carve up little neighboring Albania under an agreement by which it would acquire part of the territory with the balance going to Greece.

The denial was in response to a note of protest delivered about "supposed provocations" by Yugoslav border patrols on Albania's northern boundary.

The Yugoslav note, offering to return to Russia 31 Soviet citizens held here as confessed spies, as well as all other Russian nationals who wish to go, put the possibility of smoothing over the Communist family dispute squarely up to Moscow.

clothes he confessed he wore during the attack were being examined for evidence.

The woman told police she fell asleep in her car, the doors and windows of which she thought she had locked, while waiting for her Marine sergeant husband. He was driving up from Camp Lejeune, N. C., with friends, and had arranged to meet his wife at 13th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se. He arrived an hour after the crime.

She said a youth forced a pillow over her face, beat and raped her, and escaped with her pocketbook containing $30 and her car keys. Police said they had not found pocketbook or keys.

Egg 'Shampoo' Lands Woman In Vermont Court

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 24 (AP).—A Williston, Vt., wife was held in $100 bail today on a charge of disturbing the peace by cracking a bag of eggs and feathers on the head of the postmistress.

Mrs. W. H. Abercrombie pleaded innocent to the charge and was released on her own recognizance.

State's Attorney Lawrence Deshaw said the victim was Postmistress Mrs. Sylvia A. Warren. Deshaw said he saw Mrs. Warren "with the eggs streaming down her face."

Why the bag held the strange combination of eggs and feathers was not explained to the court.

Pep Tablets Keep Girl, 2, Awake, and Everybody Else

Leeds, England, Aug. 24 (AP).—For 27 hours, 2-year-old Janet Wheelwright was the liveliest kid in town.

She couldn't get to sleep. Throughout the night, she sang, danced and chattered. She played with every toy in the house. She built towering castles with her books. And still the sandman stayed away.

Exhausted, her mother took her to a doctor. She skipped and hopped the two miles distance. A sedative put her to sleep.

Later, it was discovered Janet had chewed on some Army pep tablets belonging to her brother, Dennis, who had just returned home after service.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Aug. 24 (AP).—Helen Sullivan, secretary to Representative Walter Judd (R., Minn.), was wed here today to William S. Jacobsen of Clinton, Iowa, former Iowa Congressman.

32,000 Low-Rent Units Authorized

Nearly 32,000 more low-rent housing units were authorized yesterday as part of the Government's new six-year program of public housing. They bring the total to 76,650 the number authorized to date.

Most of the new units will be built in the New York and Detroit areas.

Newscaster Gets Gate for Attacks On City Officials

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 24 (AP).—Wallace Robinson, manager of station WKY here, today said he has stopped a local news program because the commentator made "too many attacks on city officials."

He said the radio attacks made by James B. Rhody against the police have encouraged activity by petty thieves and delinquents.

Rhody charged in a statement in today's edition of the State Journal that his program was discontinued "at the insistence of a special group or interest who find free speech objectionable or detrimental to their activities or pursuits."

Falls Church Enrollment Starts September 2

Turkey Supply For Thanksgiving Second Biggest

The Agriculture Department said yesterday there should be plenty of turkeys and cranberries for Thanksgiving.

The turkey supply will be second largest in history. The 41,407,000 birds expected on the market would be topped only by 1945's supply of 44 million.

by unscrupulous high officials. Testimony to date—including that of Gen. Omar Bradley, Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman, yesterday—clearly refutes this, the congressional probers say.

Behind the B-36 controversy is a long-standing row between the Navy and Air Force over air-power roles. Yesterday's revelation is expected to have a major effect on the future of the two services.

document. The committee has been probing the charges for the past two and a half weeks.

As the story was unfolded, it became clear that several members of Congress, including Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) and Representative Van Zandt (R., Pa.) have known about the speech since last April. A House committee, at Vinson's request, is now reviewing the anonymous document, caused the investigation to be launched.

Worth, a tall, heavy-set wartime Navy commander, was called to the witness stand by Chairman Vinson after Van Zandt demanded he reveal its author.

The Pennsylvanian, who has been criticized for airing "ugly rumors" involving the B-36, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington—reports that the probe has failed. The article took the time to justify himself.

He read a long statement denying he had made any charges in his speech, but had simply called Congress' attention to such "moral-harming" reports.

Van Zandt declared that copies of the anonymous document were in the possession of several members of Congress before he made his speech. He further charged Carroll, U.S.A.F. chief of special investigations, but had nothing conclusive to report. He declared that Representative Deane had told him Monday he did not know how the document reached him.

Vinson tried to get the committee to proceed with plans to hear General Bradley, who was waiting to testify. But on the insistence of costlier, he issued a call for Symington and Deane.

While they were waiting for the witnesses, Bradley took the stand. His testimony backing up the B-36 and military policy in general was overshadowed completely by what followed.

Symington arrived at the same who the author was, but had requested the latter to prepare it.

Deane earlier had told reporters he had received the document in the mail and didn't know where it came from. He said he had turned it over to Chairman Vinson.

Kennedy then jumped into the fray. He angrily demanded the committee call Deane or Symington to disclose the author of the document, threatening to resign. Symington earlier had said he knew who was behind it.

But Kennedy's outburst seemed resented being left in the dark on this key point. He then called Lyon L. Taylor, a former FBI man working for the committee as an investigator.

Taylor said he had attempted to run down the point from a dossier prepared by Brig. Gen. Joseph few in the room. Vinson put the latter on the stand and, after identifying him, asked Worth if he "had handed the anonymous document to Deane."

"Yes, sir," Worth replied.

"Where'd you get it," asked Vinson.

"I wrote it," was the reply.

"From Many Places"

Flash-bulbs popped and reporters knocked over chairs running to telephones as this bombshell dropped. Vinson asked him where he got his information.

"From many places," said Worth.

Did any of it come from the Navy secretaries, admirals or other high officials, he was asked.

No, said Worth, he had done it all by himself.

Had he talked to a "man named Moher with Lockheed," officials of the Martin Aircraft Co. or "former Congressman Mozier in preparing the document," Vinson demanded.

Worth said he talked to Mozier (though not during its preparation).

"Did a Commander Davies help you with the document," asked Vinson.

Keenan then took over the questioning.

He warned Worth he could refuse to answer any questions on the ground "that he might incriminate himself." The prosecutor of Tojo did not elaborate, but indicated by his later questions he might have either libel or disclosure of secret documents in mind.

After a recess for lunch, Keenan

"MASSACRE RIVER"

The anonymous document declared that "Secretary Symington's private plane," nicknamed the Dewdrop because of stories it was originally fitted out for Thomas Dewey as a presidential plane, often had visited Floyd Odom's residence.

"Defenses Being Weakened"

Worth said Davies had not done so in his knowledge.

Vinson then asked his inquiry about Worth's motive in writing and circulating the document. The Navy official paused and the question went on:

"I became greatly concerned. It appeared to me that the defenses of the country were going in the wrong direction and were being weakened by propaganda that was not true."

Worth declared his immediate superior, Undersecretary Kimball, had not known anything about the document until he told him of four or five days ago.

Later, Kimball wired the committee:

"Mr. Worth did not tell me I was the author of the anonymous document three or four days ago or at any other time."

I Don't Remember

He asked that he be heard by the committee at the earliest possible time.

Vinson asked Worth where he got information about "heavy contributions allegedly made to Odom to the Democratic campaign."

"I don't know," he replied.

"I don't think so."

"As a matter of fact," insisted Vinson, "you got a good deal of information from Martin, didn't you?"

Worth admitted he'd gotten "some." Wan Zandt broke in to demand that the Navy civilian employee tell how he'd come to witness the document.

'Disturbing Reports'

He answered that Representative Deane had approached him through "a Lieutenant Ingraham—otherwise unidentified"—earlier in the year on behalf of Jonathan Daniels, who was reported there have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy. According to Deane, said Worth, Daniels

The Navy aide said he did not turn the document over to Deane in mid-April. On the same day, he called Van Zandt to the floor and gave him a copy of the document. Matters "far beyond parties," said Worth, he felt it should be handed over to Democrats and Republicans.

Van Zandt reminded him there was another man present, a reporter, and said the latter had taken the document to identify the newsmen as Robert McEwen then representing the Washington News Service for papers in Altoona, Pa. One on the Aisle— Peachy Ape Film Over at Keith's

By Richard L. Coe

GEE WHIZ, the movies are wonderful. Gosh, over at Keith's they've got one about a big ape, a gorilla, see, that goes to Hollywood and appears in a night club and breaks up all the furniture.

Boy, does that ape knock things around! Some drunks get him tight, see, and then he lets loose and women scream and the way he swings around the rafters of that club, gosh, the bill must have been terrific.

He lets out the lions and that causes more panic, too, because the lions are behind glass walls and look out at all the people drinking in the night club.

Then the cops come and are they sore! They're going to shoot him because, golly, you can't have an ape roaming around a big American city, when the ape becomes a hero by saving some kid escape from a burning orphanage. So they don't have to shoot him.

This happens just while the girl who brought him up in Africa is trying to sneak the ape out of the country in a big truck. The cops are after them—the ape, the girl and the boy friend, the girl's boy friend, that is—when all of a sudden the screen goes from black and white to real red. The red comes from the flames that are licking up the walls of this old orphanage, see, and they think all the kids are out of the burning building, but they aren't.

Wrestlers, Too

Up on the mansard roof there's one kid left and the ape climbs a tree and snatches the kid right out of danger. So the police excuse the ape and let him go back to Africa, where they take home movie shots and show that the girl, her boy friend and the ape are a lot happier than they were in old Hollywood.

And, gosh, I almost forgot that the ape has a tug o' war with all the big time wrestlers who can think of—Man Mountain Dean, the Iron Man, the Swedish Angel, Bomber Kulkevich, Wee Willie Davis, Ivan Rasputin, Karl Davis, Sammy Stein, Sammy Menacker and Primo Carnera. Moore, that's a girl, is his trainer and she just makes "Mighty Joe Young," that's the ape's name, toss 'em all in a pool of water on the stage.

Gee, it's as good as 30 years' worth of comics. Oh, boy.

Barkley's Speech at Dinner Spurs Romantic Speculation

Vice President Barkley gave a new fillip last night to speculation which has linked his name romantically with a pretty St. Louis widow, Mrs. Carleton Hadley.

In an informal talk to a Democratic National Committee dinner attended by President Truman, the jovial "Veep" from Kentucky chuckled uproariously when he was introduced by the new Attorney General, J. Howard McGrath, as "the squire of Paducah and the new spirit of St. Louis."

Responding amid a roar of laughter, Barkley said:

"This is an opportunity I have long sought, but found not."

He said he had some "unfinished business" in Missouri and had made a telephone call there before coming to the dinner. Then without mentioning Mrs. Hadley by name, he said:

"She asked me to give you her personal regards."

Barkley went on to say that there has always been an inseparable connection between Kentucky and

Missouri—and it looks like it's going to continue—I hope."

He said he feels "very close" to Missouri and he hopes the time will never come when it is too far removed from his home State.

President Truman told the gathering that it is a great thing to have the Vice President of the United States interested in the spirit of St. Louis.

Farm Tool Workers Vote 5-1 for Strike

Chicago, Aug. 24 (AP)—The CIO United Farm Equipment Workers claimed today a vote among 40,000 International Harvester Co. employees showed them willing to strike to gain their demands.

Officers of the union in Chicago said the vote was "better than five to one" in favor of striking. They did not announce any actual figures on voting which they said was held at all plants where the union claims members.

WINDMILL TILTING—Cervantes' "Don Quixote" comes to life in the Spanish film at the Dupont, with Rafael Rivelles as the Knight and Juan Calvo as Sancho Panza

Miss Cummings Notwithstanding . . .

Herbert's Eternal Teen-Ager Is Hub of Olney's New Comedy

This week the Olney has a comedy that's not been seen in these parts before, a situation that probably will be increasingly repeated so long as our winter playground is given over to the bioscope.

The comedy is "For Love or Money," by F. Hugh Herbert, and it has the decided advantage of being played by a good cast. John Loder, Vicki Cummings and Maide Reade repeat the roles they had for a New York season and Harry Ellerbe is again the comedy's director.

Herbert has made something of a career of writing comedies, films and radio yarns suggested by the behavior of his own daughter. Corliss Archer was the heroine of other things besides "Kiss and Tell" and, under another name, she pops up again in "For Love or Money."

This time the refreshing teenager, who says she's 24 but never mind, pops up in the home of a long-established matinee idol a few hours after his wife's funeral. The man's enchanted with the young creature and she with him. His leading lady crawls in and out of the house, seeking to establish her prior claim to be the second Mrs. Mitchell, but the Younger Set proves too much for her, even though the actress has the advantage of being portrayed by Vicki Cummings.

Big Part for June Dayton

The role of the girl is a good one and, with judicious quotes from the reviews, pushed June Lookhart into the headlines and onto Life's cover during the New York run.

Another June—Olney's petite, honeyed Miss Dayton—now has the part and "Our June" is as enchanting in it as she should be. Miss Dayton looks lovely, acts precisely as the wise child should and altogether deserves the delighted gasps of "how cute" which greeted her opening night performance.

Being of the type which long since has tired of cute girls not yet dry behind the ears, I'm afraid that were I the matinee idol I'd have latched permanently onto the witchy baggage so expertly played by Miss Cummings. Miss Cummings invariably gives the air of having been around, everywhere from the Sert Room to the woodwork. Maybe it's the hayseed in me, but I go for Vicki's jangling jewelry and bronchial bark.

John Loder Stars

John Loder is decidedly the hero of the evening, a suave player who squeezes laughs from lines that hardly deserve it. His size contrasts amusingly with Miss Dayton's mitey stature and he manages to make the actor a thoroughly likeable fellow, which is a great compliment since he might easily be a vast bore.

Donald Foster and Maide Reade have fun as the household's butler-couple, Dean Harens has the thankless role of young neighbor

Arlington School Program to Take Spot in Newsreel

Arlington County's recent school improvement program, including institution of the first elected school board in Virginia, will be featured in a coming "March of Time" newsreel on public school conditions in America.

Filming of the movie, scheduled for release about October 1, is now taking place in the county.

Shots showing the campaign for an elected school board and subsequent passage of a 6½-million-dollar bond issue for school construction, will be among the film's highlights.

B-36—From Page 14

Navy Official Is Suspended In B-36 Probe

he served three years as an Army private, working on an Occupation Forces newspaper in Germany.

Subsequently, he worked as a reporter or editor for the old Philadelphia Public Ledger; Springfield (Ill.) Illinois State Journal; Kansas City Journal, and New York American, Post, Sun and Telegraph. Later he wrote movie scripts and prepared speeches for the Republican National Committee during the Landon campaign in 1936.

His movies, Worth declared, included: "The President Vanishes," "Ramparts We Watch," and "Hold 'Em Yale." He said he wrote a play, "They Took the Town," and two action stories, "The Corpse That Knew Everybody" and "The Trail of the Serpent."

Commissioned in the Navy in World War II, he served as a liaison officer with Free French forces in the Mediterranean, taking parts in commando landings in Corsica, Elba and South France. Worth declared. Then he returned to Washington as public relations officer for Admiral Ernest King, Chief of Naval Operations.

Salary Put at $10,305
After separation from the Navy as a commander in 1946, he was hired as an $8500-a-year special assistant to former Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air John Nicholas Brown. Later, he took a similar job with Kimball. His salary now is stated to be $10,305 a year.

Questioning of Worth will continue this morning, with Odum on the stand as the next witness. Glenn Martin and Navy chiefs also will be called, Vinson said.

"Best Bomber Available"

General Bradley took the stand earlier, with Admiral Louis Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, at his side. He testified the Joint Chiefs had endorsed both of last winter's B-36 expansion programs, and said the decision was unanimous.

"I, for one," said Bradley, "am convinced that the B-36 is the best bomber available now or likely to be available during the next two years."

Under questioning by Keenan, the JCS chairman said the only practicable evaluation of the worth of the bomber or strategic bombing is by the military men and scientists of the weapons system evaluation group.

"In my opinion," he added, "Congress should accept the conclusions of such a group and not make us come before you to prove them."

Members of the committee are in dispute during the current probe over how far they should go in reviewing questions of military policy, such as the worth of and proper emphasis on strategic bombing.

Vinson quizzed Bradley on statements made by Army Secretary Gray in a recent address. Bradley, now ranking officer of all the armed forces, agreed in substance with Gray's views, saying:

"I don't believe we can get decisive results—and shouldn't count on—strategic bombing alone. Strategic bombing is more effective from bases closer to the target, and we should not rely entirely on bases at home."

"The No. 1 priority of the Air Force must be strategic bombing. Then must follow interception of attacking planes and tactical support of ground troops. I personally believe the present distribution of the 48 Air Force groups is the best we can get."

"Those who have studied the art of war are convinced that we cannot win any war in the foreseeable future without the combined action of all forces. Reliance entirely on air power would be a very dangerous thing."

Symington Warns Nation Attack Will be Sudden

By the United Press
Air Secretary Symington last night said the United States cannot bank on having time to convert industry to war production in another conflict.

Consequently, he told a nationwide radio audience, a long-range strategic bombing force must be ready to strike back immediately in case of attack.

He said these were the two great lessons learned about airpower in World War II.

1. No military operation on land or sea can succeed if the enemy controls the air.
2. If enemy planes control the air over any nation, they can bring disaster equal to an occupation by land invasion.

Chairman Edwin G. Nourse of President Truman's Council of Economic Advisors joined Symington on the program, the third of five broadcasts on the Nation's defenses.

Nourse said about half the Government's budget goes for military spending, either direct or indirect.

Falls Church Is Sued Over Drainage Job

A Falls Church woman has brought suit for $7500 against the city of Falls Church charging damage to her property by water backing up from a city construction job.

The woman, Mrs. Anne Grogan, 908 Lincoln st., also alleges city workmen illegally cut down trees and bushes on her property while digging ditches to drain a nearby area last September.

Because of the inadequate culvert, water backed up damaging lawn, flowers and a garage and caused a bad odor, Mrs. Grogan contends.

Papers in the suit were given the Fairfax County sheriff yesterday for service on city officials.

International Service To Be Reduced by TWA

Cutbacks in direct international service for four cities, including Washington, during the winter months was announced yesterday by John P. Brock, district manager for TransWorld Airline.

Effective September 25, direct international schedules will be suspended in Philadelphia and Washington, and on November 1, in Chicago and Detroit.

Domestic schedules will be closely coordinated in each of the four cities for international flights originating in New York for Europe, Asia and Africa.

5 Arrested In Park Rd. Apartment Gaming Raid

Address Served As Headquarters For Numbers, Race Bets, Blick Says

Five men were arrested yesterday afternoon in a raid on an apartment which Lieut. Roy Blick, police vice squad chief, asserted was a "gaming headquarters for upper 14th st."

He said he and his men had been tipped off that the place, on the second floor of 1436 Park rd. n.w., had recently moved there. The move took place after police began investigating a previous location on Girard st. n.w., Blick said.

Lieut. Blick said the place served as a center of operations for "sidewalk brokers" who accept both numbers and horse race bets. The "brokers," he asserted, operated on 14th st. from Girard st. to Park rd.

As police approached the Park rd. apartment on a routine check-up, Lieut. Blick said the front door was opened from the inside disclosing $150 in $1 bills on a table. Blick said he and his men entered on the basis of this evidence and found a quantity of money and slips on the table. These were seized.

In the apartment, Blick said, were only a few chairs, the table, and a telephone.

Edwin H. Trundle, 41, of 321 Madison st. n.w., and Samuel E. Briles, 41, of 2909 15th st. n.w., were arrested charged with operating a lottery, possession of numbers slips, and setting up a gaming table. They were released under $2500 bond each for appearance today in Municipal Court.

Five other men found in the sparsely furnished apartment were questioned, Blick said, and three were booked at the Tenth Precinct on disorderly conduct charges. They elected to forfeit $5 collateral each.

On a United States Commissioner's warrant, Frederick Myers, 41, of 1109 O st. n.w., was arrested in a poolroom at 626 T st. n.w. Lieutenant Blick said marked money and a numbers book were found in his possession. He was released in $1500 bond for appearance today on lottery and numbers slip charges.

2 Arlington Men Draw $400 Fine

Two Arlington men, arrested July 28 in a gambling raid at 2400 N. Columbus st., were fined a total of $400 yesterday and given jail sentences by Arlington County Court Judge Hugh Reid.

About $4700 was confiscated in the raid, one of the largest made in the county in recent years, officers said.

Milton Thevillon Arrington, 42, of the Columbus st. address, was given 90 days and fined $200 on a charge of accepting horse race bets. He was fined an additional $100 and given a suspended one-year jail sentence on a second charge of operating a lottery.

Paul J. Wagner, 26, of 2503 N. 18th st., Arlington, Va., was fined $100 and given a suspended one-year jail sentence on a charge of operating a lottery.

Both Arrington and Wagner pleaded guilty. An additional count of possessing a punchboard was nolle prossed against Arrington, and two charges—taking horse race bets, and possessing a punchboard—were nolle prossed in Wagner's case.

Detective Russell Runyon testified yesterday the $4700 in cash was found hidden in dresser drawers, shoes, and the pockets of coats in the closet.

Officers John E. Wise and Walter Bell took several numbers' bets over the phone during the raid. Runyon added in his testimony.

Also seized at the raid and offered in evidence yesterday was a market basket full of racing forms and numbers slips, two slot machines, an adding machine, and a mimeograph machine.

It was brought out in court that Arrington has two previous convictions in the District on charges of operating a lottery. Wagner had no such record, Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard said.

D. C. Social Worker Appeals Suspension

Thomas R. English, District Welfare Department social worker ordered suspended for 60 days for disrespect to his superior, yesterday appealed the sentence to the United States Civil Service Commission.

The commission informed the District Commissioners, who imposed the suspension, the case has been docketed and will be investigated.

English, who lives at 3000 30th st. se., appealed under the terms of the Veterans Preference Act.

G-Girl Buried Arlene Had No Family, Many Pals

ARLENE ARVESON
Loses fight for life

Arlene Arveson, a 21-year-old, blue-eyed blonde Government girl, was buried yesterday in a hillside grave in Falls Church.

So came to an end a 13-week, heart-breaking fight by her Pentagon fellow workers, led by a close friend, an Air Force officer, to save her life.

Pallbearers included the same Air Force officers who over the long and hopeless weeks had given their blood, until she had had 28 transfusions, in an effort to overcome the dread and rare disease which finally killed her—aplastic anemia.

Came From Duluth

Miss Arveson, who came from Duluth, Minn., was of Scandinavian extraction. She was about 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighed 110 pounds and was known as a girl of exceptional beauty—and extraordinary vitality. She was intensely fond of dancing and music. Except for a slight cough, which she dismissed as nothing, she appeared in superb health.

Then in April the disease struck. Aplastic anemia is a disease in which the blood-forming tissue in the bones is depressed, with the result that the body is unable to form the blood cells it needs. The majority of cases are fatal. The only thing to do, while searching for the cause, is to pour blood into the body by transfusion to sustain life.

Miss Arveson had no relatives here. But she had her friend, 30-year-old Capt. Russell M. Southall, 4822 Lee Blvd., who is in the air division of the National Guard Bureau.

From the first Miss Arveson's friends knew that almost surely she would die—she herself, it was said, never knew. To questions about her health she always replied, "Why, I'm fine." But Captain Southall and these friends desperately devoted themselves to doing everything possible to save her life.

Virtually the entire staff in Miss Arveson's Pentagon office—the Air Force training division—volunteered their blood for the great amount she needed even to stay alive. Of the 28 transfusions—first in Arlington Hospital, then in Georgetown University Hospital, where she was taken as a "research" case—14 were given by Air Force personnel.

Doctors meantime removed a section of the bone in her leg in an attempt to find the cause of the disease.

"No cause was found. Was With Her All Day," said Captain Southall.

On Saturday Captain Southall had been with her all day in her hospital room. With him was another friend, Mrs. George C. Abetz, 3518-B 8th st. S., Arlington, with whom she lived.

About 11:30 a. m. Miss Arveson lapsed into a coma. In the evening Miss Arveson died.

Funeral arrangements were made by Capt. Southall himself and yesterday afternoon he attended the funeral on the hillside in National Memorial Cemetery.

Hyattsville Roofer Hurt In Ladder Fall

A 29-year-old roofer suffered severe chin cuts and a possible skull fracture yesterday afternoon in a fall from a ladder.

Ernest R. Johnson, 2723 Nicholson st., Hyattsville, employed by the District Roofing Co., 3608 14th st. n.w., fell from the ladder at 2808 2d st. se., as he was climbing from the second floor to the attic. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital.

Earlier yesterday, police reported James Jones, 38, of 641 4th st. ne., suffered a dizzy spell and fell through a plate glass window at the Crown Store, 827 7th st. n.w. He required 31 stitches at Casualty Hospital for cuts on his thigh, arm and elbow.

Fine or Jail Ordered In Jobless Pay Fraud

Frederick L. Jackson, 23, of 4338 Polk st. ne., was sentenced by Judge Aubrey B. Fennell in Municipal Court yesterday to pay a $500 fine or serve five months in jail for fraud in accepting unemployment compensation benefits.

According to the charges, Jackson received $114 during an eight-week period between April and June, 1949. In applying for the unemployment checks, he failed to state that he was earning $28 a week, according to court papers.

Trolley Crash In Rush Hour Injures Two

Many Escape Unhurt In Collision Blamed On Split Switch at 14th and U Sts. N.W.

Two persons were injured and scores of others escaped yesterday when two crowded streetcars collided at 14th and U sts. n.w. during the morning rush hour.

One of the streetcars, heading south on 14th st. and operated by Joseph Foley, 23, of 1712 New Hampshire ave. n.w., apparently split a switch, police said, turning left into U st. as a second trolley, traveling north, also was crossing the intersection.

The northbound vehicle was operated by Harry Liberman, Jr., 23, of 3726 Connecticut ave. n.w.

Two passengers, Harry K. Najarin, 61, 1342 Taylor st. n.w., and Frank Costanza, 22, of 1506 Meridian st. n.w., complained of minor injuries to wrists and shoulders but did not require treatment, police said.

2 Taxi Fares Injured
Two taxi passengers were injured at 9:30 a. m. when their cab, operated by Vernon O. Marshall, 29, of 2721 13th st. n.w., collided with auto at the intersection of 1st st. and North Carolina ave. se. ave. se.

The injured persons, both of 1002 1st st. se., were Edward Brown, 46, and William Brooks, 54. They were treated at Providence Hospital for minor injuries and released.

Both Marshall, and the driver of the auto, Alfred E. Luttrell, 51, of 34 Anacostia rd. ne., were charged with colliding and paid $25 collateral each.

Mrs. Amelia N. Crawford, 52, of 4613 27th st. n.w., Mount Rainier, Md., suffered minor injuries to her left hand and left shoulder when the car she was driving was struck by a truck at Nichols ave. and Pleasant st. se.

The truck driver, Lloyd E. Arnold, 28, of Baltimore, Md., who police said, was driving south on Nichols ave. when the accident occurred, was charged with failure to see a standing auto in time to avoid collision and forfeited $25 collateral.

Prince Georges Hospital Bond Issue Is Sold

Sale of an $800,000 bond issue to a New York concern was approved by the Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday to finance the county's share of a $1,200,000 addition to the Prince Georges General Hospital.

Immediately after authorizing sale of the bonds to Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., the commissioners awarded a contract for construction of the hospital addition to the B. J. Construction Co. of Washington.

Representatives of the firm said work probably would start in about a week.

Halsey, Stuart & Co. offered the best of six bids for the hospital bonds, specifying an interest rate of 2.334 per cent over a 25-year amortization period. Previously, the B. and J. Construction Co. had submitted the lowest construction bid, setting the cost of the project at $1,011,587.

Architect's fees and the cost of equipment for the new addition will raise the total cost of the project to about $1,200,000, hospital officials said. The county has already qualified for $413,000 in Federal grants to complete financing of the construction.

Plans provide for construction of a 110-bed three-story addition to the hospital, which will more than double the capacity of the present structure, and installation of a central heating plant for the entire building.

At yesterday's meeting the commissioners also approved a new set of by-laws for the hospital, clarifying the commissioners' authority in the selection of a hospital superintendent. The new regulations give the county board sole authority to make the appointment, but suggest that the group act with the recommendation of the hospital's board of directors.

Child, 7, Hurt By Father's Car At Garage Door

A 7-year-old girl was crushed between her father's car and a garage door in Rockville, Md., last night and is at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, in possibly serious condition, according to Montgomery County Police.

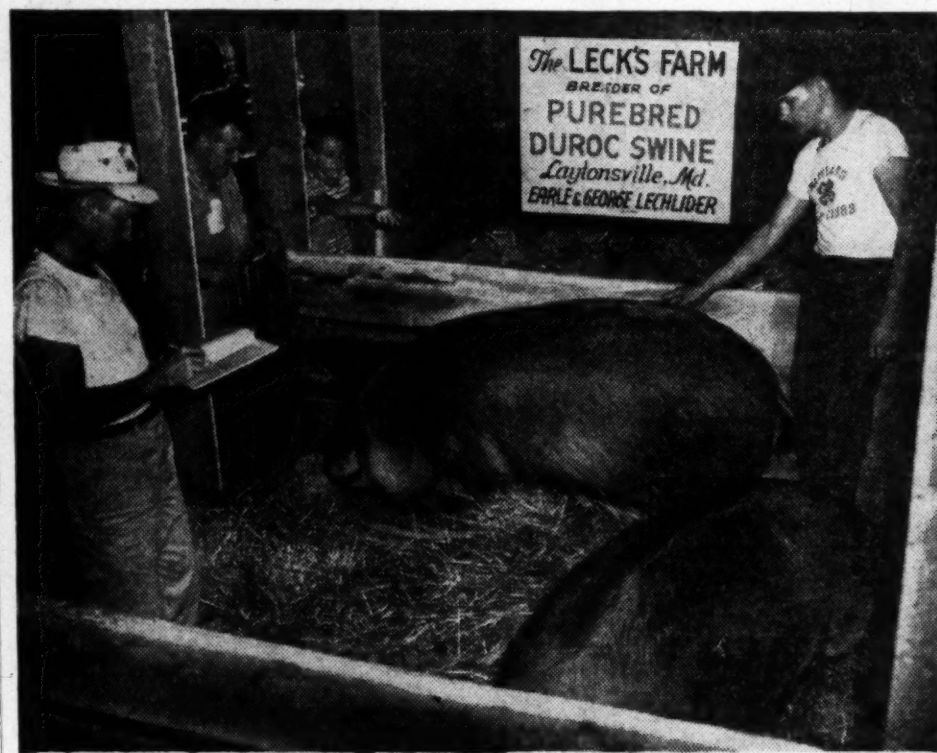

She is Pauline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mitchell of Anderson ave., Rockville. Her father told police he was backing his car from the garage, and did not see the child.

The hospital said the girl had suffered a broken nose, cuts on head and face, and possibly a skull fracture.

Montgomery Fair Expects 20,000 Visitors

An estimated 20,000 visitors are expected to throng to the three-day Montgomery County Fair—the first in 21 years—when it opens at 8 a. m. today.

County Agent O. W. Anderson said he thought as many as 400 exhibitors might be represented at the fair.

As workmen put finishing touches on the recently built fair barns and buildings, officials yesterday began entering the exhibits as they poured in by truck.

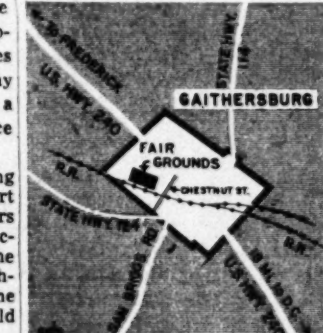

According to Anderson, exhibits will be received up until 9 a. m. today. Cash awards totaling $7500 will be given winners.

At 10 a. m. judging of Jerseys, milking Shorthorns and Ayrshire dairy cattle and of poultry will be held. Household exhibits will be judged in the afternoon.

No activity is scheduled for tonight. The fairgrounds, however, will be open until 10:30 p. m. Friday and Saturday.

Friday morning, swine; Holstein and Guernsey dairy cattle; beef breeding classes, sheep and baby beef will be judged. A baseball game will be played on the lighted fairgrounds athletic field that night.

Saturday events will feature a light horse show, beginning at 10 a. m. with the pony division. At 1 p. m. a horse-pulling competition will be held, and at 2:30 p. m. a junior light horse riders' competition.

Saturday night, as a show wind-up, a light horse show will be held on the athletic field.

Fairgrounds and buildings, now conservatively valued at $150,000, are owned by the Montgomery County Cooperative Agriculture Center. The co-op was formed last year to return the annual county-wide fair to Montgomery County.

The group eventually hopes to have a $250,000 development, complete with a lake for swimming surrounded by a buggy track. A picnic area with brick fireplaces and tables already is in use in woods near the barns.

Fraud Suit Filed Against Union Heads

A suit was filed in District Court yesterday against 13 officers of the Sheet Metal Workers International Association charging them with a $1,100,000 fraud conspiracy.

The suit which asks for injunctions to prevent conspiracy of the officers was brought by two union members, Thomas J. F. Stanton of Cambridge Heights, Long Island, N. Y., and Anthony L. Russo, 2121 Cedar ave., Bronx, N. Y. They claim to represent the 25,000 members of the union.

Among those named defendants was Robert Byron, general president of the sheet metal union. The others are all high officers.

They are charged with diverting from the union defense fund since 1942 more than one million dollars which was used for salaries, expenses, donations, conferences and meetings. It is charged that the money was not used to aid the union membership during any lockouts or strikes.

Another count in the suit charges that the officers illegally caused a resolution to be passed whereby they were given power to pay back to themselves more than $100,000 in pay cuts taken during the depression.

AVC Criticized County Zoning By Wender on Reversal Bars Pool Row Step Negro Project

Recreation Board Chairman Harry S. Wender yesterday told American Veterans Committee members they had "made a mistake" in helping to influence Interior Secretary J. A. Krug to "change his mind" in the segregated swimming pool controversy.

Wender repeated earlier statements that Krug at one time agreed to let the District agency operate its six swimming pools on a segregated basis. Publicly, the Secretary declared he would not permit any backward step on the racial question in pool operation. Two of the pools had been used on a non-segregated basis, but one, Anacostia, was closed after race clashes.

Speaking at an AVC luncheon, Wender said idealists should realize segregation in play facilities cannot be wiped out "overnight." He called such an approach "an utter impossibility," though he said he personally is opposed to segregation.

"You can't just educate a few policemen," he said, "but you must educate all the million people who live here." He referred to an education program recently conducted for Park Police officers.

Wender pointed to an interracial football clinic recently conducted at Central High School, a white school, as a successful experiment in integration. He also called the experimental use of two playground areas this summer on a non-segregated basis "a successful program."

The Seventh-Day Adventist Theological Seminary will hold commencement exercises at 8 p. m. today in the Takoma Park Adventist Church. Degrees will be awarded 32 graduates.

Principal speaker will be Francis D. Nichol, editor of The Review and Herald, the official church organ, who will speak on "The Heavenly Pilgrimage."

Seven of the 32 graduates will receive their degrees in absentia. Dr. D. C. Rebock, president of the seminary, will preside.

Highway Meeting Monday

The proposals include raising the minimum age for newspaper carriers to 12 and the minimum age for street trades such as shoe shining to 14.

Thief Gets Rare Pitcher From Auto Of Senator

Antique Originally Was Used to Pour Diamond Dust, Holland Reports

Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.) yesterday reported to police the theft from his car of $300 worth of perfume and an antique pitcher said to have been originally used for pouring diamond dust.

The theft occurred while the car was parked last week on C st., near New Jersey ave. se., near the George Washington Inn, where the Senator and his family live.

Senator Holland said his wife and daughter, Ivanhoe, 18, last Thursday noticed that the right front window of the car had been forced but did not detect anything missing. They drove to their home in Bartow, Fla., and did not realize what had been pilfered until yesterday.

Mrs. Holland telephoned the Senator and reported the following was stolen: one leather lady's make-up kit, containing several bottles of rare perfume, sent to her by servicemen, and the small antique pitcher, which was also a gift; an empty patent leather pocketbook, and a color film viewer with family pictures.

The Hollands' car was broken into last spring but nothing was taken.

Jail Habitué, 34, Goes Back to Cell

A 34-year-old man who admits spending 16 years of his life in jail was back behind bars yesterday. His latest period of freedom had lasted only since July 26, he told police.

He is David J. Devenney of no fixed address, arrested early yesterday by Pts. N. L. Richardson and T. B. Basnight of the Third Precinct, as he emerged from the broken front door of the Alandale Market, 1254 20th st. n.w.

The officers had been summoned by Emmett Comiskey, 1923 N st. n.w., at 3:25 a. m. when he heard glass breaking nearby. The officers said Devenney had $30.89 in his hand and admitted taking it from the store.

They said he told the following story: He was paroled July 26 from the Pennsylvania State penitentiary after serving half of a 20-year sentence for armed robbery.

Since then he worked a week in Baltimore, but didn't like it and came to Washington. Arriving here, he burglarized a store and was caught. He couldn't remember locations because he is unacquainted with the city.

Police sent him to Municipal Court yesterday on a housebreaking charge. Judge Aubrey Fennell held him under $2500 bond for grand jury action. Meanwhile, police also notified Pennsylvania authorities of Devenney's arrest here, for possible action on revocation of his parole.

4 Eating Places Rated Grade A

The Alexandria Health Department yesterday added four more restaurants to the list of eating places given Grade A rating cards.

They were: Alexandria Room, Prince, st. and Daingerfield rd.; Queen Restaurant, 1110 Queen st.; Wheel Crab, 2018 Duke st.; and Whelan's Drug Store, King and Washington sts.

A total of 22 of the city's 135 eating establishments have not yet received any rating.

Four restaurants closed voluntarily, because they could not meet health standards, health officials said.

Polio Cases Appear To Be Leveling Off

Polio cases across the country appeared to be leveling off last week with the United States Public Health Service reporting yesterday that the number of new cases indicate the peak has been reached or is near.

The week ended Sunday, August 21, showed the smallest numerical increase since the week of July 9.

A total of 3422 cases was noted, compared with 3158 the previous week. This is an increase of 264 cases compared with an increase of 707 for the preceding week.

The District of Columbia reported 10 new cases in the week ended, bringing the 1949 total to 35, the same as last year.

21 New Cases in Virginia
Virginia reported 21 new cases last week with the total a year ago for the corresponding period 38. Of the new cases, one was from Fairfax County and another from Alexandria.

Maryland's record for the week showed 10 new cases, contrasted with seven a year ago for the corresponding period. Seven of these cases were reported from Prince Georges County, and the other three from Montgomery County.

Increases were reported in seven of nine major geographic divisions, the largest in the East North Central States (from 888 to 1035), the Middle-Atlantic States (681 to 720) and the New England States (274 to 313).

Increases in the other four divisions were each less than 15 cases, while decreases were recorded in the South Atlantic States (from 147 to 108) and the West South Central (from 290 to 236).

Gains Exceed 28 in 6 States
Six States reported increases of more than 28 cases. They are Michigan (from 225 to 330), Ohio (134 to 209), New York (539 to 601), but declines in New York City (from 348 to 337), Massachusetts (139 to 189), Illinois (299 to 348) and Iowa (81 to 114).

The incidence increased slightly in California (from 106 to 115) and declined in Texas (from 109 to 104).

The corrected total to date is 17,306, as compared with 9743 for the same time last year.

Club Pleads Guilty to 2 ABC Charges

Ralph Feldman, who identified himself as treasurer of the Club Bengasi, 1423 U. St. N.W., pleaded guilty yesterday on behalf of the club to two charges of sale of liquor after hours.

The plea came at a hearing before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on complaint of policemen who testified they saw the alleged sales on Sunday, July 3 and Sunday, July 24.

Feldman told the board he had recently come from New York City. He said that although he knew sales were illegal after midnight on the nights in question, he believed it was legal for customers to have drinks on their tables after those hours.

The ABC board took the case under advisement. The board also announced withdrawal of an application for a Class C liquor license by the Naples Italian & American Restaurant, 3901 Nichols ave. S.E. The place now has a Class D license. The board said the withdrawal was made when it was shown that the place is within 400 feet of a church, where Class C licenses are prohibited. A protest hearing scheduled for yesterday was canceled.

A 3-year-old boy from the 1200 block of E. St. N.E. was admitted and diagnosed as a polio case at Children's Hospital yesterday. The other case reported was a 17-year-old boy of the 500 block of N. St. N.W. who entered Gallinger Hospital August 14, but was not reported as a polio case until yesterday.

The 1948 total on the corresponding day last year was 40.

Small Fry Going Back to School in Petticoats, Pantaloon, and Plaids This Autumn

By Peggy Preston

THESE are busy times for the apple-for-the-teacher crowd. Before the trek to kindergarten and grade school begins, the small fry have a dozen things to do. There are farewells to be said to beloved summer pals; trips to be made, despite repeated opposition, to dentist and doctor; relatives to visit with and be visited by. Then, to top it off, mother decides it is high time to think about school outfits. That means several shopping tours to town—additional interruptions in the stream of golden hours that separate summer vacation from the first day of school.

But mother knows best, and there's little use in arguing with her. Besides, maybe it won't be such a bad idea to look over the clothes situation. Heaven knows the adults seem to put great stock in such matters. Could be there's something to it after all.

Fanciful Fashions

A little girl, for instance, taking a look at all the new finery that has been designed for her, is apt to be quite fascinated. She'll think she is in fairyland, or reading from her favorite Mother Goose book when she spies the fanciful fashions recommended for her wear this season.

Mother herself will be reminded of McGuffey's Readers, those inimitable textbooks of another century, and their illustrations of quaintly dressed little boys and girls. For an old-fashioned air dominates children's wear for 1950, making the clothes more endearing and cunning than ever before. In high-style circles one finds such items as hoop-skirted petticoats, and "Underettes," pantaloon that reach below the knee

But on the more practical side are the plaids, of the type worn by the prim sisters in "Little Women," and made up into modern, functional clothes. Boys as well as girls will have plaids in their wardrobes this winter. Brother may have a gingham tartan shirt to match sister's skirt—provided he isn't old enough to object. The darker tartans are in highest favor because they are more practical than the bright ones of former years. Backgrounds include black, red, dark green and blue. You'll see them in gingham dresses and in wool coats and jackets. Separate wool skirts, box pleated with suspenders worn with a pull-over jersey sweater, are ideal for grade school youngsters.

Jumper dresses are being shown in a variety of fabrics. There are velveteen for dress-up occasions, corduroy and gingham for school and play.

Velvet or velveteen coats with matching hats are being made with great charm for the under-5-year-olds. One in particular is black, cut on princess lines with cape collar, tied with a cluster of ermine tails at the throat.

Grade school students are being offered more practical dress-up coats, made of tweed or heavy wool with velveteen touches at the collars and pockets. Rainwear, made of improved water-repellent fabrics, is increasingly popular as mothers discover that a good raincoat will serve as an excellent second best in fair weather.

To Get Pointers From Truman Today

Miss Daniel Heads Girls' Nation

By Genevieve Reynolds

SILIM, suburb-naired Miss Josephine Alice Daniel of Osterville, Mass., last night was elected president of Girls Nation on the Nationalist ticket. She defeated Marilyn Elizabeth McCormick of Delphi, Ind., Federalist Party candidate.

Also riding to victory on the Nationalist Party ticket was Miss Ernestine Evelyn Smith of Guthrie, Okla. Her opponent on the Federalist ticket was Miss Sarah Jean Newman of Cleveland, Tenn.

At noon today the Girls Nation president and vice president will receive pointers from President Truman on the duties of the Chief Executive.

Miss Daniel has been a straight A honor student for the past five years. A member of the school magazine staff, she has served as its editor in chief for the past two years.

A student at Barnstable High School, she will be a senior this fall. Miss Daniel was active in athletics, serving on the intramural basketball and hockey teams plus the community baseball team. In addition, she was first violinist and cellist in the high school orchestra, sings also in the church choir. Vice president of the junior class, she also was a member of the junior prom committee.

The Nationalist Party's platform advocated elimination of the present electoral college system in favor of a popular vote for the President.

Dismissals Discussed

When the Girls Nation delegates opened their simulated Senate session earlier yesterday on Capitol Hill, they were handed the day's most urgent problem—the pending dismissal of some 135,000 Armed Forces civilian employees.

Senator Claude Pepper expressed concern over the number of people that would be thrown out of work. Senator Margaret Chase Smith said that the first she had heard of the dismissal was through the press.

Senator Smith told the Girls Nation Senators that a group of real Senators had tried to persuade Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson to delay the announcement of the reduction in the Armed Forces until they could discuss the situation. "But we were called over at 9:45 this morning and given a 10-minute statement," she explained. However, she did not comment on whether or not she opposes the reduction.

Later in her speech the Maine Senator pointed out the need for less spending, declaring, "We are trying to economize, which we must do if we are going on living the way we want to live. We cannot go on spending beyond our means."

Outlines Senator's Duties

Mrs. Smith outlined the duties of a Senator for the 96 delegates who have gathered here from 47 States and the Canal Zone to learn firsthand the functions of a democratic government. The seven-day training course is being sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary. While headquarters for the group is American University, the teen-age delegates hold mock sessions in the House and Senate Committee rooms, the Supreme Court and other Government agencies.

"Members of the Senate are really ambassadors to Washington or glorified errand boys," said Mrs. Smith, referring to the extra duties and errands of the lawmakers, including the answering of thousands of letters. She made it clear that she was not critical of the extra duties, and liked the letters because it showed constituent interest.

Expressing sympathy for the "great burdens built up for youth," Mrs. Smith advised her listeners to work, study and learn everything possible to meet future problems and responsibilities. Also she admonished them to offer constructive substitutes for that which they criticize.

"You in Girls Nation have the nearest thing to equal rights in Washington because you receive the same treatment as the delegates to Boys Nation," she averred. In conclusion she emphasized the necessity of keeping a two-party system for this Republic.

Mundt Stresses Freedoms

Senator Karl Mundt told the delegates that Washington is the general headquarters for the world forces arrayed against tyranny who are battling to protect and promote the basic concepts of free enterprise, free speech and free political decision, plus freedom of thought, press and action.

The South Dakota Senator urged the girls to return to their homes as "junior citizens declared to the proposition that our American way of life, with all its imperfections and deficiencies, offers more happiness, more opportunity and more freedom than any system of government ever operated in any area or era in the history of the human race."

Calling upon the young leaders to resist the "siren lure of socialistic schemes," he said that socialistic schemes had failed throughout history and now were bringing disappointment and disillusion to millions of people in Great Britain.

As the delegates departed from the Senate side of the Capitol to visit the Congressional Library, the Smithsonian Institution and the FBI, they were wearing gay-colored campaign placards. Red, yellow, green and blue signs of the Nationalist and Federalist Party candidates and supporters carried such slogans as "Oh, Joy." Another, supporting Nationalist Party nominee, Josephine Alice

Daniel, showed a large frankfurter with the connotation, "Hot Dog, It's Joy."

Prior to electing officers last night at headquarters, the delegates heard an address by Mrs. Hubert A. Goode of Portland, Ore.

"Governing a state or a nation, as you no doubt have discovered, is not an exact science," she explained. "In government, this element added to that element does not always bring the same reaction. There is no textbook we can give you as a sure guide to the future, no fixed formula for solving all the problems of the nation and the world, now and forever."

Society Sees Tom Clark Take Oath

By Marie McNair

THE EYES of Texas were on a favorite son yesterday. On the porch of the White House executive offices President Truman stood by as Tom Clark became the newest member of the Supreme Court, taking the oath of office from the Chief Justice, Fred Vinson.

Gathered on the porch were Vice President Barkley and those members of the Cabinet who are in town—Secretary of Defense, Louis Johnson; Secretary of State, Dean Acheson; Secretary of the Treasury, John W. Snyder; the new Attorney General, Howard McGrath, who delayed his swearing-in to attend Justice Clark's ceremony; Secretary of Commerce, Charles Sawyer, and Postmaster General Donaldson.

Clark Family There

Mrs. Clark was there, too, looking almost as young as her daughter, Mimi. Mimi's navy blue frock was edged in a tiny pink ruffle at the neckline to match the pink rosebuds pinned to her shoulder. Mrs. Clark's black frock had cap sleeves; two enormous purple orchids were at the neckline and her little white hat fluttered with a veil. In the family party also were the Clark son, Ramsey, and his bride, young Mrs. Clark wearing the palest of aqua with a natural colored straw hat on her fair hair.

Also in the group on the porch were Mrs. Vinson, in a black, white and green hot weather print; Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, retired, President Truman's former Chief of Staff, and Clyde Hoey, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Stuart Symington, Secretary of Outside in the August sun, 100 or more of the Clark's friends and the justice colleagues, stood among fragrant summer roses as the ceremony went on. Practically all of the Texas delegation in Congress was there, and I spotted Senator and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, Mrs. Johnson in lilac linen; Senator Tom Connally—but not Mrs. Connally; Representative and Mrs. Clark W. Thompson, Representative Ken Regan, Mrs. Regan looking effective in cocoa brown and a wide brimmed hat.

Then there were Senator Theodore Green, Senator and Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Senator Claude Pepper, Representative Albert Thomas, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Freer, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Love, Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Herbert May, and Mrs. Grace Stewart.

Son to Hayeses

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Crawford Hayes of Silver Spring, Md., announce the birth of a son, their first child on Thursday, August 18, at George Washington University Hospital. The baby has been named Kenneth, Jr. He is the grandson of Mrs. Joseph J. Guidry of Waretown, Mass., and of Mrs. Kenneth C. Hayes of Greensboro, N. C.

Women Leaders

Mrs. Charles Brannan and Mrs. Cal Cone wore the same print, one in brown, black and white, the other with green the predominating color. Mrs. Brannan stood with Mrs. India Edwards, explained that Secretary Brannan was attending the farm-in-a-day program in Apple Creek, Ohio.

Tiny Mrs. Frieda Hennock, sole woman member of the FCC, looked tanned and healthy; Mrs. Leslie Biddle, who was alone, reported that her husband is in the hospital with bursitis. Being stopped at every step were former Secretary of the Army, Kenneth Royal, and Mrs. Royal, here from New York. Mrs. Royal wore a black silk suit and white lilac trimmed hat.

Others there were Undersecretary of the Interior, Oscar Chapman, and Mrs. Chapman in navy blue and white; Mrs. John W. Snyder, in dark blue, chatting with Mrs. Brien McMahon; Senator man's former Chief of Staff, and Clyde Hoey, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Stuart Symington, Secretary of

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 16, Cut Off From Money and Kinfolk for Time Being, Is Dismayed by Young Stepmother's Belligerent Treatment

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 16, and my stepmother, Helen, is only 12 years my senior. She is quite good looking and dresses very well, and in the five years I've had to share my home with her she hardly noticed me at all, until my father died 18 months ago. Then she really clamped down on me.

Always before I was allowed to choose my friends and the clothes I bought, and to do as I pleased with my evenings, but now Helen wants to take charge. She wants to know where I've been and who with; tells me to be home by 10:30 p. m., not to wear so much lipstick, not to take the car without her consent, and I am really annoyed with this unusual display of interest.

One evening last week I'd been to a party and when I got home at 12:30, Helen was waiting up for me and she was furious. She said I wasn't to go out after dinner for a month, no pocket money for a month, and I wasn't to take the car—and in fact I was surprised that she didn't strike me.

I GUESS I got mad, for I told her to mind her own business and I have gone out since, and I do take the car. So far she hasn't said anything more, but our maid tells me I'd better be careful, because Helen says she is going to send me to school in September, to some out-of-the-way place.

My father left us a great deal of money and a very nice house, but I haven't any money of my own as yet. What father left for me is tied up in trust until I'm 18. I privately think Helen wants me to leave home so she can do more entertaining of her numerous boy friends; but I don't want to go away, and I have no place to go.

My parents' relatives are scattered, some in England, some in South Africa, one uncle in France, so what should I do? If Helen would even talk to me about it, I feel we might come to some better arrangement, and perhaps also I would understand her new motherly interest in me. Should I apologize and take my punishment? Should I grin and bear it until I am 18 and come into my money? Please tell me what to do.

C. R.

Miss Maguire, John Keller To Wed in Fall

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Hamilton Ewing Maguire of Washington and Bluemont, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Anne Droop Maguire, to John Greenway Keller, son of Col. and Mrs. William Lordon Keller of Washington.

Miss Maguire is a graduate of the Madeira School, and Pine Manor Junior College in Wellesley, Mass. She is a provisional member of the Junior League of Washington.

Mr. Keller, an alumnus of Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass., was graduated from Yale, where he was a member of the Fence Club and Wolf's Head. Following military service as a major in the Field Artillery in the Pacific theater, Mr. Keller was graduated from the University of Virginia Law School. He is a member of the Chevy Chase Club.

The wedding is scheduled to take place in the late autumn.

Service Cruise

The fifth in a series of summer cruises on the S.S. Bear Mountain will be held tonight under the auspices of the Unification Society, composed of business, professional and religious groups. Guests will be servicemen from camps and hospitals in and around Washington.

DEAR C. R.: This is a problem-situation for both you and Helen, because obviously you do need mothering, and obviously she can't provide it, because she doesn't know how, and doesn't want to, furthermore.

Her bland neglect of you in earlier years issued from resentful dislike, as does her more recent display of bossy interest. Her quizzes and orders are simply an aggressive display of hostility.

Why the resentment on her part? Firstly, because you were your father's daughter, hence her rival (she felt) for his affections. Secondly, at present, because you now hold (from her view) a "rival" stake in the fortune and nice home he left. Finally, because looking ahead, she sees home competition in the "boy friend" field, if you remain on the scene—no kin to her—while growing into young womanhood.

IT MAY be, of course, that with cool self assurance and chip-on-shoulder, you denied her any opening to make friends with you, while your father was alive; and thus she may count you a determined foe of hers—and feel there's "no love lost on either side." Your social pace, past and present, seems pretty precocious, pretty free-wheeling, for a young teen-ager; and possibly you have a head-strong attitude that invites kickback from her—that she dares to deal, since your father's death.

However, bearing in mind the years of mothering you've missed, in years when good mothering is vitally important, I am an advocate of yours in the present crisis, whatever your mistakes of judgment on the score of behavior. And it is my impression that you are very frightened just now, not knowing how to protect yourself from Helen's devious unfriendliness.

For advice: Don't be reckless just to defy Helen. Keep moderate hours and proper company in reputable places; and drive carefully. Guard against doing things she could twist into accusations that you are wild and wayward and should be locked up in boarding school for your own protection. But never act afraid of her. And don't apologize for the recent scene she made. Courage, poise, a "long head," a clear conscience, and a conservative pace henceforth are essential to strengthen your hand in "holding your own" with her.

M. H.

Ask Anne

Will you help me with some color problems in a house which we shall be moving into September 1? In the living room the drapes are flowered, rose white green; the sofa is rose; the rug deep blue, one easy chair is rose and white; a new chair is a deep cream. The wall paper in this room is a quiet creamy tan stripe on three walls but the fireplace wall is a large flowered paper in greens. Are we right in changing this last wall immediately to match the other three? The 11 by 12 dining room adjoins this room by an arch and the green flowered wall paper is on all these walls. We do not plan to repaper the dining room. What color drapes should I use in the dining room in view of the fact that we plan to soon change the rug to a pinkish tan.

T. T.
Yes, your living room would be more restful and better coordinated if the walls were alike in an inconspicuous stripe. Since the dining room is small, I'd suggest you use plain drapes.

—you could use white, egg shell, cream or the lightest value in the wall paper design for the drapes. Your choice of rose beige or beige is good.

The furniture in our bedroom is modernistic in grayish color. We have not yet bought the chair for this room. I plan to use some chartreuse green, drapes and spread or drapes and chair. Would it be too much to have all three in that color, drapes, spread and chair? It is a small room with single bed, commode and chest-on-chest with mirror above. What about the color in lamp shade? I have a beautiful quilt-spread in shades of green and tans and yellows, but with the modern furniture probably that would not do for a spread.

Since the bedroom is small, it would be all right to use the same color for chair, spread and drapes. This much chartreuse would be right, too, if the room had a warm exposure, west or south. However, if the room is on the north and inclined to be dark you might like to use a lighter color—yellow perhaps for the drapes or the spread. If you use chartreuse for all three, use a warm color for accents such as the lamp shade. Yellow or peach would be lovely with chartreuse.

Strictly speaking, the pieced quilt should be used in an early American type of room, but these days when decorators are combining modern with traditional furniture with interesting results, you could surely use it as a spread if you wished.

Youth Today Seeks Better Family Life

Young American couples today are no less fond of children than their great-grandparents; they have more sense of responsibility, and more understanding of what children need. This is one of the points made in a new book, "Voluntary Parenthood," (Random House) by two authorities in the field, Dr. John Rock, professor of Clinical Gynecology at Harvard Medical School, and David Loh of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

Noting that a Vassar professor found that the average girl in his class this year says she wants four babies, while 20 years ago the consensus was two, the authors add: "Most Americans want to give their children all the advantages that until recently were reserved for the privileged few. A longer and more carefree childhood, a much longer period of schooling and recreation are regarded as the birthright of an American in perhaps two-thirds of the Nation's families."

"There seems to have been a rather revolutionary change in attitude among students, perhaps because of the influence of wholesomely fearless married undergraduates on the campus since the war."

Doting Parents Blamed

The authors believe that the parents of mature children often prevent the young couples from having children and seek to keep them in what the elders consider a state of innocence. They say: "Parents who think it a privilege to support their children for many years in the pursuit of a career think there is something unwholesome about subsidizing the most important career of all, parenthood. . . . It is difficult to condone the attitude of well-to-do middle-aged parents who accept the conditions of modern life which impose dependency upon them of their physically mature children but who are unwilling to assist those children towards the family which maturity seeks."

As to information on sex and birth control, the authors say: "If this information is not provided by truthful sources, it will be gathered from carnal chatter and blind taboos. Unfortunately it may be for a child to learn the answers to his earliest sex questions from little hoodlums in the alley or behind the barn or from casual companions at school, it is probably better that way than learning only ridiculous fairy tales from embarrassed or over-protective parents. . . . The goal of sex education should not be to compel young couples to have children, but to make them want to have children."

Birth Control Detailed

This is the purpose of their book, the authors point out, and they give detailed chapters on the reasons for childlessness and how they may be corrected, on controlling conception, on the role of physicians, clinics, hospitals, public health and other agencies. But they stress throughout the theme of their title, and on the subject of "how many children?" one of the commonest asked of marriage counselors, they advise: "Consider your own circumstances carefully and decide on the basis of both reason and sentiment, not just one of them. . . . There is no ideal size for a family; there are only ideal families, and they run to all sizes."

Dealing with the ethical aspects of family planning, the book quotes authorities from all creeds, Catholic, Protestant and Jewish, showing that none insist upon unlimited procreation and all seek the same ideal, happy and healthy families.

Trimming Tricks

A few trimming trifles will work wonders in giving your tired room a lift. Give your imagination an airing and you'll be surprised how inexpensively you can brighten a room.

This decorative note for a living room or foyer is suggested by the Woman's Home Companion. Cover a length of wire looped double with bright braid, string several small bright pictures down it.

If you have a dull, dreary lamp table, you might try this idea. Slip cover the top in a bottle green, sky blue or dark-brown felt. Then add white fringe around the edges.

A third, easy to achieve inexpensive trimming trick from the Companion centers around a low drum-shaped hassock. They suggest slip-covering it in an inexpensive fabric. To add a decorator's touch, stripe the sides with shaggy loop fringe.

Fans in Fashion

Fans are returning to their own in the wedding picture. Old pictures show that brides carried fans at many different periods in history, and there's a trend toward this pretty custom now. If you've an heirloom fan that can be covered or repaired to go with your gown, you're a lucky bride.

Marking Silver

If your gift to the bride is such a silver article as a candleabra, trays, bowls, or odd pieces of flat silver, it is best not to have it marked with initials. There's always the possibility of duplicates, so having the silver unmarked, and therefore exchangeable, will be a blessing.

Banish Onion Odor

When making vegetable soup, you can come through the ordeal perfectly without any onion odor on your hands if you will prepare the onion first, followed by the parsley, tomatoes and celery. Each one of these vegetables helps to remove the onion smell and all three absolutely banish it.

MRS. HAROLD WEEKS PHILPOT was married August 13 at the Church of the Brethren in Washington, the Rev. Warren D. Bowman officiating. Howard Greer Shows Suits With Box Hips

Hollywood, Aug. 24 (P)—Hips will be square next season, if Designer Howard Greer has his way. Suits with box hips featured the movie designer's presentation of his fall and winter collection for 1949-50.

The box, a featherbone construction which extends out over the hips, was made into the jacket of the suit. It was also used on dinner and evening jackets.

Extremely high necklines and long sleeves on sheath-like afternoon dresses were an interesting contrast to the boxy hips and the huge puffs and bustles on the evening gowns.

Greer had a couple of the latter low low necklines, which he termed "sex traps." But he's not a complete devotee of the deep plunge. He showed others with conventional and high lines. A slim evening skirt had the usual slit-to-the-knee reversed. Just the back of the leg was visible.

There were no simple, tailored suits. A row of braid around the hem, hipline or bodice gave each a dressed-up look. One suit had a red satin brocade collar.

Bugle beads were used consistently on Greer's evening wear. A cardigan jacket of silk chiffon was solidly embroidered with gold beads, and was worn with both evening and afternoon dresses. Some dresses were just long beaded sheaths.

Strapless gowns with bodices of intertwined satin and lace; gowns with boned bodices of satin petals (which looked like artichokes); and gowns with taffeta brocade puffs over tube skirts are examples of the luxurious evening clothes Greer designed for the coming season.

Good Taste In Dress

"Good taste is like the weather—everybody talks about it, but only very intelligent people know what to do about it."

This is the comment of Designer Jane Derby, who calls good taste in dress "a sense of fitness applied to everything about clothes from the feather on a hat to the heel of a shoe. It means more than just knowing what to wear when—it means knowing what to choose for your particular self from all the wealth of tempting merchandise the stores offer. It means taking infinite trouble to find the right shape in a collar to balance your face and your shoulders, searching until you find the perfect shoe for your foot from the point of view of both looks and comfort. It means knowing—or learning—that trimming belongs on a dress only if everything else is utterly simple. It means knowing yourself, what you can wear with the best effect while making the least 'noise.'"

Helps to Homemakers
Soft collars look like new when ironed on a folded Turkish towel. Unbleached muslin window shades will help brighten a dark kitchen.

Keep the cleanser and soft cloth handy to the bath tub. It might encourage the bather to clean up well after his bath.

Have a definite place in which to put overcoats and galoshes and as soon as they are dry, put them there. It will avoid all that a full rush in the morning of a bad day.

Instilled Courtesy
When your child receives an invitation to a party, or a gift through the mail, see that he replies within a few days. If this courtesy is instilled in the young child it is bound to be continued when the child has grown.

Room for Comfort
It quite spoils the dignity and charm of the formal dinner when the guests are placed so close to each other that they are constantly touching each other. If you cannot seat your guests comfortably, have smaller dinner parties.

More Interesting
If the youngster is ill and very tired of toast and hot milk, try cutting the bread in shapes of animals with cookie cutters and toast these alluring pieces. It may help out a great deal.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

THE WASHINGTON POST
Thursday, August 25, 1949

The French Influence, No Doubt?

Hal Feyling of 634 G st. se. tells me that those bargain-special window signs aren't confined to the dress trade. A store near 8th and E st. se., is currently offering:

"Special Swim Suits—One-Half Off."

CLUB NEWS

Renie Quible, secretary of the District Line Club, wants me to remind you that the group meets tonight at 8 at the Petworth Library, Georgia ave. and Upshur st. nw.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

I suppose you've heard about the small railroad out west that was plagued by a series of accidents.

Somebody was forever running into the last car of their trains, and smashing up a lot of expensive equipment.

The road finally solved its difficulties by taking the last car off all its trains.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Thoroughbred red male Persian cat, no dogs or children; will deliver." (National 5647 after 7 p.m.)

"Half-grown, half-housebroken gray striped cat; accustomed to children—mine lead it a dog's life." (Shepherd 8862.)

"Beautiful black-and-white kitten, Persian strain, housebroken." (Alexandria 4736.)

"Outstanding cat for gentle person; loves to be stroked." (Woodley 8822.)

"Nice fox terrier puppy, about 3 months old." (Warfield 7388.)

"Pure white kitten, 4 months old; a real beauty with one great misfortune—she is deaf. We can't keep her because of danger from traffic." (Taylor 0356 after 6 p.m.)

"Two lovable kittens; housebroken, but not to children." (Sterling 7795 after 6 p.m.)

DIPLOMAT

W. A. McDowell of 23 Worthington dr. says that the announcer on the "Take a Number" program is about the slickest article that ever came down the pike.

When a guest on the program the other day said she was 45, the announcer replied:

"You don't look like 45, Madam—you look like a million."

There's a guy who has made a life-long friend.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

We all know that it's necessary to paint white "lane" lines on the streets. But why is it necessary to do this work at the height of the rush hour?

The situation around the 14th st. Bridge is well known. But blocking off all except one lane each way is certainly no help.

The other day it took me an hour and 10 minutes to travel approximately 1 mile (from the Pentagon to the Bureau of Engraving).

Others involved in the same mess told me I made comparatively little good time.

W. C. Robinson,
207 Mississippi ave. se.

Dear Mr. Robinson:
I've been complaining about this situation for years, to no avail.

I have pointed out that other large cities do line painting and repair work at night, or during nonrush hours of the day. I've asked why the same system wouldn't work here.

There has never been a satisfactory answer. I'm usually told: "We have two crews, one day and one night, and we always try to avoid congested areas during rush hours. However, we'll look into your complaint."

That's the last I hear about it, until the next time that somebody writes in to report that Highway Bridge traffic was tied in knots again.

PERSONAL NOTES

James C. Wilfong, Jr., 1541 Montana ave. ne. The explanation is simple. I can't use all the material which is sent to me. When a member of the District Line Club sends in an item that falls to make the column, he sometimes submits it to the club's "Gib Sheet" editors. Therefore the club's publication often contains material I passed up—and District Line has been kidding me that I turn down better stuff than I print.

Mrs. J. A. Orbison, 2737 Devonshire pl. nw.: My guest on the program that day was R. C. Darnell, president of the Society for Parapsychology. The society's address is 915 18th st. nw.

YEP, IT'S A BIG PLACE

The next time you feel that your job is too much for you, and "there must be an easier way to make a living," just imagine how you'd feel if you had to run the Pentagon telephone system.

The building contains 20,148 telephones, and each is used for an average of about eight calls each day. At peak periods, it takes 95 operators to run the boards; at the end of each working day about 162,000 calls have been completed.

The Pentagon distributes 24,500 directories of its own branch numbers, so that callers may dial each other with a minimum of delay. The pages of the directories are about the same size as those in a city phone book, and each book contains 109 pages of numbers.

The current unification program has increased the usual turnover of Pentagon personnel, with the result that each day the operators are supplied with mimeographed sheets listing several hundred name and number changes.

At the end of each month, a brand new directory is published, because by that time the corrections have become unmanageable. The current edition contains 11,000 changes that occurred in the past 30 days.

It's small wonder that businessmen are willing to pay 5 per cent to anybody who can find his way around the building without a Seeing Eye Dog.

EVEN THE NEWSMEN THINK IT'S FUNNY

The boys in the NBC newsroom have clipped a cartoon from the "New Yorker" and posted it on the bulletin board. It's been up a week—and still draws roars of laughter—and still draws roars of laughter.

The cartoon shows two men sitting before a microphone in a broadcasting studio. One is a newscaster, waiting to be introduced; the other is his announcer.

A huge gorilla is walking out of the studio, clutching a script. The announcer is saying:

"And now for the human side of the news."

Listen to the District Line on the air Monday through Friday at 1:30 p. m., over WRC.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Backstage Tussle Rises in CIO

(Editor's Note—While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

By Robert S. Allen

An extraordinary backstage scramble is taking place within the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

While the anti-Communist Phil Murray leadership is preparing to boot out the leftist unions at the CIO convention, the latter are racing to beat this move to the punch with a walkout of their own.

The "lefties" have called a meeting in New York on August 30. Inside word is they will stage a bolt and proclaim the establishment of a national labor organization of their own. Informed sources say this is the new Communist party line.

Call for this powwow was issued by the following: United Electrical Workers, Food, Tobacco and Agricultural Workers; United Public Workers, United Furniture Workers, United Packinghouse Workers, United Workers. Significantly not in this list is the International Longshoremen's Union, headed by Harry Bridges. Although the leading CIO leftist, Bridges can not take his union out of the CIO. An attempt would split it wide open. He is already under powerful attack within the organization.

However, it is reliably reported that Bridges had a leading hand in the decision that convened the leftist meeting. If he doesn't show up personally, he is certain to play a decisive role behind the scenes. He is the No. 1 choice to head their new leftist labor organization.

Meanwhile, Murray and his anti-Communist leaders are setting the stage for a clean break with the "lefties" at the Cleveland convention. Regardless of what the latter do at their August 30 meeting, the CIO chiefs intend to purge their rolls in Cleveland.

Rhapsody

Arkansas and Alabama aren't sure they haven't grounds to be miffed at Representative Frank Boykin. The rotund Alabamian became excitedly lyrical when he met Arkansas' gorgeous entry to the "Miss America" contest. Representative Brook Hays (D., Ark.), introduced the young lady to Boykin at lunch.

Blue Funk

The Federal Trade Commission is in a sad state. With one exception, its six members are either ill, scared stiff over prospects of being reappointed, or their appointment is stymied in the Senate. The exception is Commissioner William Ayres, 80 years old, who still has five years to serve. Of the other five members, Acting Chairman Lowell Mason is trading softly because of uncertainty over whether he will be renamed next month; Commissioner Ewin Davis has been ill in a hospital for weeks; Commissioner Garland Ferguson, whose term expired last year, doesn't know where he stands, and the latest appointee, John Carson, liberal Republican, is still awaiting confirmation by the Senate.

Coal Slowdown

John L. Lewis' two-month-old coal slowdown has had no effect on industry so far. Stockpile reserves have gradually diminished, but all consumption demands have been met. Only group so far hard-hit is small mine operators, particularly in West Virginia. They have been unable to operate profitably on three-day basis and a number of them have been forced to shut down. This has thrown hundreds of miners out of work, through no fault of their own or the operators.

While Lewis' slowdown has caused no general adverse effect as yet, difficulties are anticipated when cold weather sets in. Such steel plants as have been digging into their coal reserves are becoming uneasy. Similarly, retail dealers are warning customers to order now.

Miscellany

In early American days, a favorite gift to Presidents was wigs. John Quincy Adams received more than 50 wigs while in the White House. Since 1939, the United States has expended more than 72 billions dollars in foreign loans and frequent speeches... At the aid. That is nearly three times recent Grand Rapids, Iowa, convention of the Reserve Officers Association, Maj. Gen. Harry W. Lucas of Illinois, is certain his Navy man being elected national commander. The latter is already making frequent speeches... At the aid.
